Ethiopian Peace Nearing as Italy Yields to League

Italy Gives Assent to Plan of Arbitration Offered by Powers.

Council at Geneva Ratifies Formula

Agreement From Rome Comes After Warning About Meddling.

The Situation Abroad:

Italy accepted an agreement at Geneva expected to settle her dispute with Ethiopia.

Premier Mussolini told a cheering throng in Rome Italy's thousands of troops were ready "for any trial."

Hitler's recent address before the Reichstag was believed likely to result in a conference on the proposed air limitations pact, and a personal conference between the German leader and Foreign Minister Laval of France.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Geneva, May 24.—The League of Nations Council unanimously adopted tonight two resolutions accepted by Premier Mussolini for a compromise proposal looking to peaceful settlement of Italy's border dispute with Ethiopia.

The action was taken at a public session, called precipitately upon Italy's yielding to British and French demands for arbitration of the dispute, after the Council, in a secret session, had given preliminary approval to the proposals.

The first resolution, citing border incidents leading to the dispute, said the two governments have nominated arbitrators and "are in agreement in entrusting settlement of these incidents to the same arbitrators in accordance with article five of the Italo-Ethiopian treaty."

Full Liberty Accorded.

The League Council, in the second resolution, left to Italy and Ethiopia "full liberty to settle the dispute in question."

In the event that a final understanding shall not have been reached by July 25, and the four original arbitrators have failed to reach an agreement on selection of a fifth arbitrator, the resolution provided that the Council should meet August 26.

The Ethiopian representative, who sat temporarily with the Council as a member, announced that Ethiopia interprets the two resolutions to mean "Italy will refrain from sending additional troops to East Africa and will not employ troops already there for aggression."

Benito Mussolini, heretofore adamant to British and French insistence that he submit the controversy to conciliation and arbitration, agreed, it was announced, to these terms:

1. Reaffirmation of the whole of Article 5 of the Italo-Ethiopian Treaty of 1928, which provides for arbitration of differences and specifies that there shall be no recourse to war.

2. Fixing of a time limit for conciliation procedure.

3. Fixing of another meeting of the league council to be held in August should arbitration fail to effect a settlement.

Delegates Are Jubilant.

Delegates to the League Council, which was called into session at 11:15 p. m. (5:15 p. m., E. S. T.) to hear the glad news, said jubilantly that one of the greatest crises in the league's history had been averted.

Fears had been expressed in French and British quarters that Mussolini might follow Japan's and Germany's example in withdrawing from the Geneva organization if it persisted in attempting to deal with the dispute.

Il Duce's surprise yielding came at the end of a day that saw hopes for a settlement rise and fall, as French and British mediators conferred with Italian and Ethiopian representatives.

Baron Pompeo Aloisi, the Italian delegate telephoned Mussolini the successive proposals put forward by Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, and Pierre Laval, French foreign minister.

Once British sources said Mussolini had flatly declined to consider the arbitration procedure provided in Italy's treaty with Ethiopia, and Laval, apparently giving up hope, had announced he would have to leave tonight for Paris.

Deadline Idea Wins.

Capt. Eden's resolution, which finally brought acceptance from Mussolini, set June 25 as the "deadline" for effecting conciliation and August 25 as the time limit for arbitration.

France and Britain, both eager to keep the controversy from flaring into open hostilities, reportedly proposed time limits both for conciliation and, if that failed, for arbitration, even though they have been reluctant to see the dispute aired over the Council tables.

A spokesman for the British delegation said his nation would continue negotiations, remaining firm in its stand that any action by the

Enlarged TVA Gets Setback In Committee

Administration Bill Tabled by House Group, 13-12; Passed by Senate.

By the United Press.

A militant group of Democrats and Republicans joined in the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday to deal a smashing blow at President Roosevelt's power program by striking at the heart of TVA.

After weeks of bitter debate the committee voted 13 to 12 to table an Administration bill authorizing the TVA to issue a total of $100,000,000 in bonds to purchase properties of private utilities and to clarify its legal right to sell power developed at its properties.

A similar measure was passed by the Senate after Senator George Norris (Republican), Nebraska, in a swift parliamentary stroke, crushed a one-man filibuster which Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont, was waging against it.

New Dealers on the committee declined last night to concede that the legislation had been killed for this session. Even such vigorous opponents of the proposed changes as Representative Andrew J. May (Democrat), Kentucky, agreed that the committee ultimately would report some additional TVA legislation, but emphasized that it would be "written by Congress and not by the 'brain trust.'"

May referred to disclosures made in an audit of TVA conducted by Comptroller General McCarl's office alleging that contracts had not been let by competitive bidding, that some awards had been made on a purely personal basis, and that there had been many "irregularities" in connection with the affairs of the TVA.

"Any new legislation reported will contain rigid auditing provisions for TVA and safeguards for competitive bidding," May said.

McCarl appeared before the committee before it voted yesterday and proposed an amendment which would place transactions in the giant development project under the jurisdiction of his office. Such an amendment was defeated in the Senate when offered by Senator

Senate Votes Record Sum For Big Navy

$459,606,846 Provided for 24 New Ships, 555 Planes.

Appropriation Exceeds House Figure by $11,690,000.

A new high in peace-time American maritime appropriations, envisioning a Navy second to none, yesterday was approved by a 55-to-18 vote in the Senate, and started down the conference route to final enactment.

The bill called for $459,606,846, providing an $11,690,000 increase over House appropriations. The huge outlay will permit the laying of 24 new keels under the Vinson-Trammell treaty Navy program. Naval air forces were not neglected. Funds were provided for 555 new planes.

Passage followed decision of militant members of the Senate Munitions Committee, unsuccessful in a number of limiting amendments, not to impede further Senate action on the bill.

The bill goes to conference with the House, where an attempt will be made to iron out differences between the two measures.

Cuts Opposed.

High Navy officials had appealed to the Senate not to "slow down" the Navy's construction program.

The net result is that keels for two cruisers authorized in 1929, costing $19,150,000; one $27,895,000 airplane carrier; 15 destroyers costing $6,155,000 to $7,830,000 each, and six $5,647,000 submarines, will be laid next year under Navy schedules.

During several days of debate, members of the Munitions Committee had vainly attempted to attach amendments including proposals to further curtail munitions profits, to forestall collusion in bidding, and to give the State Department a say in the choice of the scene of naval maneuvers.

Only one minor munitions amendment, sponsored by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, was accepted. It requires shipbuilders to submit to the Navy Department full estimates on which they base their bids for warship construction.

House Slashes Total.

The Budget Bureau originally approved $23,380,000 for commencing work on 24 new vessels in 1936, but the House cut this sum in half, reducing the construction figure to $11,690,000. This would have provided for the laying of only 12 keels.

The Senate committee restored the full amount, after Secretary of the Navy Swanson said:

"In view of the fact that the 1936 appropriation for 'increase in the Navy' is the first appropriation made by Congress subsequent to the Vinson-Trammell bill, it would appear to be a very undesirable precedent for this Congress to cut in half the estimate prepared by the Navy Department and approved by the Administration."

Ultimate cost of the 24 new ships, it was said, will approximate $197,427,000.

Some of the money appropriated will go to complete ships started from a $278,000,000 PWA allotment in 1933.

Provision for 555 new planes is part of a program whereby the Navy plans to increase its air force to 2,000 ships in 1940. Of the 555 new planes authorized, 282 will be replacements.

Pair Talmadge Freed Convicted in Robbery

Rome, Ga., May 24 (AP).—A Federal court jury late today convicted Leland Harvey and Aubrey Smith, pardoned last year by Governor Talmadge while serving sentences of approximately 100 years, of the $9,875 pay-roll robbery of two bank messengers here last August. Sentences were not immediately pronounced.

The two men went on trial Tuesday and sought to establish alibis that they were in Harvey, Ill., the day of the robbery.

Rift of Barrymores Will Be Permanent

Dolores Takes Flat, John Advertises Debt Repudiation.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, May 24.—Two sudden developments today involving John Barrymore, screen actor, and his wife, Dolores Costello, bolstered persistent Hollywood rumors that the famous film couple are approaching a definite parting.

The first was a notice appearing in a legal publication signed "John Barrymore," giving notice of nonresponsibility for debts "contracted by any person other than self."

The second was an announcement by Col. W. H. Neblett, counsel for Barrymore, that attorneys for the couple are negotiating for a property settlement. Neblett added his client did not intend to sue for divorce.

"Of course," Neblett said, "we have no way of telling what Mrs. Barrymore will do."

Attorneys for Mrs. Barrymore refused to comment on the advertisement or state whether a divorce is contemplated.

Neblett said negotiations for a property settlement between the couple started after Barrymore and his wife separated several months ago. Shortly after the separation, Mrs. Barrymore left the family home in Beverly Hills and went with her children to an apartment to live.

The non-responsibility advertisement read:

"Notice is hereby given that the undersigned will not be responsible for any debts or liabilities contracted by any person other than self, on and after this date, May 3, 1935."

Navy's Planes Finishing Hop From Midway

16 of 40 Ships Reach Pearl Harbor as Maneuvers Approach Windup.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, May 24.—Speedy air patrol squadrons of the Navy streaked into Pearl Harbor from the West at close intervals late today, heralding the conclusion of epochal war-like maneuvers in the midpacific.

Sixteen planes comprising the VP-8 and VP-1 squadrons, leading a scattered flight of 40 ships from Midway Island, had arrived at 1 p. m. (Honolulu time). The Navy completed evacuation of Midway Island about two hours later.

The first squadron completed a 500-mile hop from French Frigate Shoals, where the planes flew from Midway Island yesterday.

The VP-8 Squadron of four planes was commended by Lieut. Comdr. G. T. Owen.

Announcement was made that 12 planes of VP-4 Squadron were due in midafternoon, and that VP-10 Squadron with six planes was due about dusk.

The Pearl Harbor naval base was a beehive of activity as the air armada began to arrive and the battle fleet approached Hawaiian shores for a rest from the strenuous pretense of warfare.

Here to view the wind-up of the maneuvers, Henry L. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, suffered an attack of indigestion, described as not serious by his physician, but he was ordered to bed aboard the cruiser Houston.

One of the adventures of the far-flung operations, which resulted in the death of eight men, the loss of two planes and collisions involving four destroyers, was the finding of

N. Y. Socialite, Ex-Vanderbilt, Ends Her Life

Despondent Over Marital Rift, Emily Whitfield Commits Suicide.

By the Associated Press.

Las Vegas, N. Mex., May 24.—Clad in pajamas and a flowing robe, Mrs. Emily Whitfield, former wife of William H. Vanderbilt, was found dead today at her ranch of a revolver wound, which, authorities concluded, she inflicted while despondent at the prospect of a divorce from her third husband, an author.

The death of the New York socialite, estranged wife of Raoul Whitfield, was called suicide by a coroner's jury.

From information supplied by a Las Vegas friend, Mrs. Virginia Haydon Stone, authorities read their story of the last hours of Mrs. Whitfield at her ranch, Deadhorse, 25 miles west of here.

Mrs. Stone visited Mrs. Whitfield last night after the latter had returned from a Santa Fe conference with her attorney in a divorce action against Whitfield. Mrs. Whitfield asked Mrs. Stone to spend the night with her because she said she felt despondent. Mrs. Stone said she had to return to Las Vegas.

Mrs. Whitfield retired about 11 p. m., and investigators theorized the fatal shot, unheard by the rest of the household, was fired near midnight.

Esequiel Segura, an employe at the ranch, testified he found the body of Mrs. Whitfield about 7:30 a. m. when he went into the house to light fires.

Segura said Mrs. Whitfield, who was in her thirties, lay on her bed with a .38-caliber revolver in one hand. Powder burns showed on her left side, he said.

Segura said he awakened Victor Chevret, ranch manager, who was

Garner Runs Again in '36, Says Farley

Unqualified Statement Dispels All Doubts of Rift With Party.

Veto Peril to Victory Scouted as Greater Gain Is Forecast.

Vice President Garner will be President Roosevelt's running mate again in 1936, James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, said yesterday.

This announcement came unqualifiedly in answer to a question at a press conference.

It was construed as answering all doubts arising as a result of various reports that Garner was in favor of bonus legislation and furthermore that he was privately cold to some New Deal measures. Any prospect that such differences as might exist would cause the Administration to look for another candidate for Vice President was thus definitely brushed aside.

Unperturbed Over Veto.

At the same time Mr. Farley remained unperturbed over the political effects of Mr. Roosevelt's veto message. He said it would have no effect on the ultimate result and that Mr. Roosevelt would carry more States next year than he did in 1932. Pennsylvania, he felt certain, would this time be counted in the Roosevelt electoral column.

Expressing doubt that any bonus legislation would be enacted at this session, in view of the sustaining of the veto of the Patman bill, Mr. Farley made no predictions as to what Congress might do next winter. In any event, he said, there is plenty of time before the 1936 election for water to run over the dam, and he was confident "all difficulties would be settled before then." He declined to enlarge upon this cryptic statement.

Farley disclaimed having had anything to do with influencing the vote of the new Senator from New Mexico, Chavez, who, although an active champion of the bonus in the House, arrived in his new Senate seat just in time to vote against overriding the President's veto. Mr. Farley said no one had sought to influence Chavez on behalf of the Administration.

"Senator Chavez had enough loyalty to do it himself," Mr. Farley said.

He indicated also that when Chavez comes up for election next year, the Administration will support him.

To Resign Postoffice Post.

For the first time Mr. Farley indicated definitely that he would resign later on as Postmaster General. It is understood he will do this in order to be free to direct Mr. Roosevelt's re-election campaign.

At the same time Farley, who also is chairman of the New York State Democratic committee, predicted Gov. Lehman would be a candidate for a third term and expressed the hope that he would. Belief is current among politicians that Farley himself will be a candidate for Governor of New York in 1938. Re-election of Lehman would fit into such a program, whereas anyone else elected next year would probably insist upon a chance at re-election two years later.

Death of John S. Cohen, publisher of the Atlanta Journal and Democratic national committeeman for Georgia, has brought a clash between the Administration forces and the Talmadge organization in Georgia. Last year a Talmadge controlled State convention voted to unseat Cohen as national committeeman. The Democratic national committee refused to take notice of this action and continued to recognize Cohen as national committeeman, on the ground that a regularly chosen national committeeman could not be replaced during his four-year term except by resignation or death.

Hugh Howell, chairman of the Georgia Democratic State executive committee, was quoted by the Associated Press as saying that Rayburn Clay, Atlanta banker, was the national committeeman.

Democratic national committee headquarters yesterday said the of-

House Prepared For Quick Action To Extend NRA

President Sends Word of Approval for Wagner Labor Affairs Bill.

Little Concession To Senate Likely

Measure Coming Before House to Fix Date as April 1, 1937.

By Felix Bruner.

The way was cleared yesterday for immediate action by the House on the proposal to extend the national industrial recovery act. Slight concessions are expected to be made to meet in part the Senate's stand as embodied in the Clark resolution calling for 9½ months extension.

At the same time President Roosevelt expressed his approval of the principles of the Wagner labor disputes bill, which is expected to be pushed as supplementary to NRA legislation. Some amendments, not materially affecting the major provisions of the bill, are being drawn.

Before the House Ways and Means Committee, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, repeated the statement he made in a speech in New York Thursday night that the death of NRA would mean a general strike. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, first NRA administrator, told the committee that extension of NRA for only 9½ months would be a "catastrophe."

Leaders See Roosevelt.

These developments followed two conferences at the White House, one of leaders of Congress and another or representatives of labor and/or Government agencies.

Another blast at the NRA was issued by Herbert Hoover at Palo Alto, Calif. The former President condemned what he termed "bureaucratic coercion" and the use of the "boycott."

The House NRA measure is expected to be reported out by the Ways and Means Committee Monday. A rule will be sought to make it possible to take the measure up Tuesday.

Speaker Byrnes said every other piece of business, including AAA amendments, will be put aside until the NRA legislation is passed. He said he hoped the measure would go to the Senate Wednesday or Thursday.

The committee is expected to report the measure out with these provisions:

1. Extension until April 1, 1937. The Clark resolution provides for extension to April 1, 1936, and the President has asked for extension to June 16, 1937.

2. Retention of the ban on price-fixing as contained in the Clark resolution. This is looked upon as a concession to the Senate.

Definition Made Broad.

3. A definition of intrastate commerce which would provide that not only interstate business but business "substantially affecting" interstate commerce could be regulated. This is a much broader provision than that contained in the Senate resolution which merely provides that business not engaged in interstate commerce may not be regulated.

4. A period of 90 days for rewriting codes. The Senate resolution provides only 30 days. NRA officials have asked for as much as six months.

The two provisions on which a clash between the House and Senate is expected involve the length of extension and the interstate commerce provision. Both measures would continue section 7(a)—which would be "vitalized" by the Wagner bill—and prohibition of child labor.

President Roosevelt repeated yesterday his stand for a two-year extension. He said he had not asked that it be made permanent because he felt the NRA was in process of evolution.

The first White House conference yesterday was attended by Senator

Wed to Danish Prince

Frederik Weds Princess Amid Royal Applause

200,000 in Stockholm Hail Ingrid's Marriage to Danish Prince.

By the Associated Press.

Stockholm, Sweden, May 24.—Two hundred thousand cheering Swedes packed Stockholm's streets this afternoon to bid farewell to Crown Prince Frederik of Denmark and Princess Ingrid of Sweden, Frederik's bride today and Denmark's future queen.

Their brilliant wedding in the thirteenth century church where all kings of Sweden's Bernadotte line have been crowned was attended by such an assembly of crowned heads, royalty and notables as Scandinavia seldom has seen.

It was her own people, however, of which the brown-haired, blue-eyed new Crown Princess of Denmark smilingly took farewell as she and Frederik, long sweethearts, sailed away for Copenhagen, their new home.

Quays and bridges of the Stockholm harbor were masses of shouting humanity when the royal newly weds, after proceeding from the royal palace to the landing stage at one side of the palace, embarked in the Swedish royal sloop.

Ingrid said goodby to her father, King Gustaf, smiled at the cheering thousands and the sloop crossed the harbor to the Danish royal yacht Dannebrog, while harbor fortress guns boomed salutes. A squadron of Danish torpedo boats convoyed the yacht.

The largest group of European royalty ever assembled in Stockholm sat as spectators in the ancient cathedral, Storkyrkan, as the couple said the marriage vows.

It included Frederik's parents, King Christian and Queen Alexandrene of Denmark, King Leopold and Queen Astrid of the Belgians, Crown Prince Olaf and Crown Princess Martha of Norway, and the former Crown Prince of Norway.

Also in the church were Sweden's and Scandinavia's nobility, high military and naval officers in full parade dress, leaders of the government and foreign diplomatic representatives.

American Messiahs

By The Unofficial Observer

Author of "The New Dealers"

Installment VII—Tarzan of the EPIC (Part 3)

This is the seventh installment of "The American Messiahs," by the Unofficial Observer, author of the "New Dealers," which appeared last year. While "The American Messiahs" does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post, it is commended as a most candid discussion of the mavericks, the reformers and the radio spellbinders now booming their way across the American political stage.

The Sinclair candidacy put Roosevelt on a hot spot. After consultation with the beaten Creel and other Democratic experts, it was decided that Sinclair should be supported if he would modify his program and accept a platform which could be approved by the National Administration. Sinclair lived up to his share of the bargain. He produced "Immediate EPIC" and secured its approval by the post-primary Democratic State Convention. The modified plan dropped the temporary scrip feature—which was probably unconstitutional anyhow—and toned down the harsh outline of EPIC's production-for-use program to softer contours more acceptable to the producers for profit. The main features were, however, left in the plan, including the device of putting the unemployed to work in leased factories and on leased or purchased land.

In all this, Sinclair could quite properly maintain that he was in full accord with the New Deal, since Harry Hopkins' FERA was doing exactly the same thing that EPIC proposed to do, in a number of places. It was doing it openly in Ohio and was planning to undertake it on a large scale in the vicinity of Washington. It was putting the unemployed to work on a huge scale, in canning meats, making mattresses and clothes, and so on, and it was supervising a rural rehabilitation and subsistence homestead system by which dispossessed farmers and farm laborers got back on the land from which the profit system had driven them.

Sinclair also emphasized the fact that his plan was much cheaper than the continuation of the dole or work relief. This argument was widely ridiculed, but he was obviously right that it would cost less money to have the unemployed clothe and feed each other by their

Husband Will See Wife Enter Convent to Remain for Life

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 24.—When the hour of prayer arrives Sunday evening, Sister Beatrice (Mrs. Alfredo Oswald) will enter the Carmelite Convent here, never to come out and never to be seen by the outside world again.

Her husband—now Brother Oswald, a lay member of the Society of Jesus—will be in the small group who will see her for the last time Sunday.

Five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Oswald separated to devote their lives to religion. They had been married 18 years at that time.

Today they saw each other for the third time during those five years. After tomorrow they will never see each other again. They saw each other today following mass, in which Brother Oswald assisted the Rev. Charles G. Herzog, S. J. After the mass friends saw Sister Beatrice as she stood behind a grill in a small room.

"This is the last time," Brother Oswald said as he stood near the grill. "It is all part of the sacrifice. We have already said goodbye."

After Sunday, Sister Beatrice's sole communication with those outside the convent will be carried on through a thin wood partition, and then only by special permission.

Their life together took them to Italy, Brazil and the United States. For eight years, Oswald taught at the Peabody Conservatory here and Mrs. Oswald taught Italian there.

They met when she was 11 and were married when she was 18.

Brother Oswald is now in charge of music at Georgetown Preparatory School, Garrett Park, Md.

He said today that he and his wife heard the call individually and talked the matter over together with friends and counsellors before deciding to take the step.

Special Colored Grand Jury Indicts 2 Women in Fairfax

Reflecting the Supreme's Court's decision on the use of colored persons on juries, Fairfax County yesterday impaneled a special grand jury composed entirely of colored persons to hear charges of arson against two colored women.

It was the first time in the long history of the county that a colored grand jury had been drawn, although more than 52 years ago some colored persons served on a trial jury trying a colored man. Yesterday's jury promptly returned the indictments asked by the Commonwealth's Attorney.

The two women indicted were Mary Carpenter and her mother, E. Louise Carpenter. True bills charging them with arson were returned, and the mother also was charged with "procuring the burning of a dwelling to defraud the insurer."

The regular grand jury, composed entirely of white persons, returned indictments against the two Monday. Defense attorneys moved to quash the indictments because there were no colored persons on the grand jury or on the list from which it was drawn. The court dismissed the bills on this plea, and then summoned the special grand jury which met yesterday.

The special panel which met yesterday included Alexander White, of Sideburn, foreman; John Pearson, Atanna Payne and Henry Page, of Fairfax; Otis Wade and Ollie Tinner, of Falls Church, and James E. Collins, of Merrifield.

The only previous use of colored persons on juries in the county occurred in 1883. In that year Charles Botts, colored, was indicted for arson by a grand jury composed of white persons. His attorney called attention to the lack of colored persons on county juries. The trial then was postponed, and when the case came up, a jury was drawn consisting of eight colored and four white persons.

Another Year For Cotton Act Will Be Sought

White House Parley Agrees to Act; Wallace Replies to Hastings.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

On the eve of a national referendum among more than 500,000 wheat farmers to determine whether the acreage control plan should be continued, President Roosevelt and a group of congressional leaders yesterday agreed to press for legislation extending the Bankhead cotton control act for another year.

Immediately after the White House meeting it was determined to attach the provision for a one-year extension to the bill containing the controversial AAA amendments, made the unfinished business of the Senate yesterday.

If the Bankhead act is extended for one year, clearing the way for the cotton planters to decide whether they wish to have a production quota placed on the 1936 crop, the Administration will immediately offer to lend 12 cents a pound on this year's cotton crop, those who attended the White House conference asserted.

President Roosevelt later in the day, however, said continuance of the 12 cents a pound loan now in force was not discussed at the White House conference. It was understood that extension of the cotton loan figure was agreed on between the congressional group and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Wallace Answers Hastings.

Meanwhile, Mr. Wallace made a detailed answer to 17 questions propounded to him by Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, regarding the recent "farmers' march" on Washington. Senator Hastings wanted to know whether the AAA or the Department of Agriculture financed or inspired the meeting of 4,000 farmers here a week ago.

Secretary Wallace reiterated the statement of Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, that this agency "has not sponsored nor financed, nor permitted its agents to sponsor, nor permitted county production control association funds to be used to finance the farmers' visit to Washington."

The Agricultural Secretary pointed out that county agents are not directly responsible to the Washington Government but to the State directors of extension, employed by the State Agricultural colleges, whose appointments are subject to the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. Wallace said he had made telegraphic inquiry of the State directors of extension and learned that "no extension funds were used to finance farmers, farmer committeemen or county agents making the trip," the farmers raising the money among themselves, and that no extension director has reported instructing county agents to promote the visit.

He said it was found that about 100 county agents were among the farmers who came here, excluding any from Texas, which had not yet answered inquiries. Mr. Wallace said his department, "having no direct supervision over the county agents did not and could not forbid these county agents to make the trip to Washington."

Once the farmers were here, he continued, he and Mr. Davis did all they could to welcome and help them. He said he arranged for the meeting with President Roosevelt on request of farmer representatives. Mr. Wallace explained that "the hat was passed" among the farmers several times to get funds to pay for the use of Constitution Hall, where the farmers met.

"A subordinate employe of the AAA from Alabama, I have since been told," Mr. Wallace said in his letter to Senator Hastings, assisted his farmer friends by personally sharing responsibility with the farmers for the rent of the hall and later advanced the $250 needed for the afternono session, being reimbursed from the funds collected from the farmers."

Defends Farmers' Action.

Mr. Wallace set forth these facts as an introduction to his letter as a summary of the answers he made in detail to each of the 17 questions projected by Senator Hastings. In one answer he defended the right of farmers to come to Washington. He said for many years groups of various kinds have come to Washington for the purpose of influencing legislation.

"Surely the farmers have the same right," he asserted. "And surely they should not be censured for meeting on the White House grounds, in the open, where all could see them, rather than bringing their influence to bear in secret places."

Meanwhile Senator Hastings returned to the attack on the President for his speech to the farmers, contending that Mr. Roosevelt would not invite 4,000 veterans urging bonus legislation to the White House nor did he ask the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to call on him.

"He wants around him a crowd praising him," he asserted.

Senator Hastings, who is chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, charged that Federal agencies had inspired both the farmer and the NRA "march." He contended that the visit of the farmers "started a new kind of thing which makes minorities more powerful and dangerous than ever before."

The referendum of wheat farmers, which will take place between 9 a. m. and 8 p. m. today, will determine whether the AAA will fix a production quota for wheat for next year on which acreage allotments will be based. The balloting will be open both to signers of acreage reduction contracts for this year's crop as well as to non-signers, provided they were eligible to sign contracts by operating a farm on which wheat was grown in any of the years from 1928 to 1932.

The voting will be supervised by 1,328 county wheat production control associations. Approximately 911,000 wheat farmers have acreage adjustment contracts, representing 28 per cent of the average wheat acreage during the base years, 1928 to 1932.

Those who conferred with the President regarding extension of the Bankhead act were Secretary Wallace, Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Senate Agricultural Committee; Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agricultural Committee, and Senator John H. Bankhead, co-author of the act.

Act Taxes Excess Cotton.

This act, passed a year ago, provided for a prohibitory tax on cotton produced in excess of quotas established by the Secretary of Agriculture. The act for last year's crop set the total tax-exempt production at 10,000,000 bales and provided that its provisions might be applied to this year's crop if two-thirds of the cotton planters expressed a desire for such control. The vote was almost 10 to 1.

The proposal agreed on yesterday was to authorize the President to apply the act's provisions to next year's crop, provided such action is favored by two-thirds of the planters. If the act is extended it is planned to hold this referendum in the fall. The Supreme Court has agreed to review the constitutionality of the act, but argument will not be heard until next October.

Senator Smith announced he would move to attach a provision for one year's extension of the Bankhead act to the pending AAA amendments. At some later time, he said, he would sponsor a bill modifying the Bankhead act in order that the prohibitory 50 per cent tax on excess cotton would be suspended should the total production in the country or in any State fall below the quota set.

Byrd Prefers House Bill.

At the same time, Senator Smith moved to substitute the AAA amendments, as reported to the House, for the pending Senate bill. Both Smith and Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, arch-opponent of the AAA amendments, said they considered the House bill a "better prepared" piece of legislation.

"But the licensing features, as applied to individual farmers, are entirely too drastic," said Senator Byrd, who has consistently opposed "farm regimentation" under the Secretary of Agriculture.

"I will offer several amendments to limit this power."

The Virginian said he favored provisions of the House measure setting aside 30 per cent of customs receipts to encourage American farm exports, somewhat after the manner of the old McNary-Haugen bill.

Between You and Me

Roosevelt - Garner in 1936; Governor Farley? The Three Carnations Case.

By Raymond Clapper

OUTLINES of the 1936 presidential campaign on the Democratic side are becoming fairly definite.

Democratic National Chairman Farley says without qualification that Vice President Garner will be Mr. Roosevelt's running mate again next year. That knocks down the ears of several young hopefuls who had believed that Garner, now approaching 66 years, would step aside.

Farley also indicates that later on he will retire as Postmaster General to manage the presidential campaign.

Previously he had indicated that he expects Mr. Roosevelt to be re-elected with the aid of liberal and left-wing votes and is not counting upon the support of conservative business interests.

That tips off the general nature of the Democratic appeal next year, although it must be remembered that Mr. Roosevelt is fond of the middle of the road and may at times, as in his bonus veto message, take action that will appeal to right-wingers. It seems probable, however, that the main emphasis will be toward the left rather than the right.

With these key circumstances in mind, the Democratic side of the picture becomes reasonably clear.

* * * *

Republicans, on the contrary, are in as much confusion as ever. Everything is uncertain. At the moment the right-wingers appear to be in the ascendancy. They have taken the forthcoming Midwest grass roots meeting in hand and apparently will run it with the precision of a controlled national convention.

As the preliminaries shape up, this meeting will sound like a reunion of Eastern old-guarders, Kansas Cain Raisers, for instance, have been thoroughly smothered. Young John Hamilton, red-headed Kansas national committeeman, has bumped off quasi-New Dealers and is taking to Springfield a delegation of hard-shells such as Dan Casement, anti-AAA pamphleteer. William Allen White, veteran Progressive, is so discouraged over the prospect that he appears determined to decline an invitation to participate. These preliminaries are typical of the drift of sentiment on the Republican side.

Overhanging the Republican camp is the shadow of Herbert Hoover. Belief that he is attempting a Grover Cleveland comeback is increasing. Republican leaders generally are opposed to his return, but there is such a lack of major timber and the field is so divided that it might be the old story of 1928 over again. That is a possibility rather than a probability. Still it adds confusion.

* * * *

Talk of a Republican coalition ticket persists with Al Smith and Lew Douglas, ousted as budget director by Mr. Roosevelt after a disagreement over the Administration spending program, mentioned as possibilities. Interesting talk but extremely doubtful.

* * * *

Now you know practically as much as anyone else in Washington does about it—which isn't too much.

* * * *

There's a neat maneuver going on which involves Postmaster General Farley's future. Recently seemingly authoritative information trickled out that Gov. Lehman, now in his second term, would leave Albany and let someone else run next year. Mr. Farley, who also is New York State chairman, stepped in and said positively that Lehman would run again. At the same time Lehman hedged and said he didn't know what he would do.

The explanation appears to be that General Farley wants to be Governor of New York. He will be unable to run next year because he will be busy running Mr. Roosevelt's re-election campaign. If Lehman were replaced by a new Governor, a re-election nomination would be due him. That would block Farley out of the New York picture until 1940. If Lehman runs again, the way is left open for Farley to be a candidate for Governor in 1938. Which is how it will probably work out.

* * * *

Propagandists are using the chain-letter scheme. One Cabinet officer received such a letter with a request that he mail copies to a list which included President Roosevelt and Herbert Hoover. Another Cabinet officer has received a letter suggesting he send a pound of limburger cheese to five persons he dislikes. The idea appealed to him but he objects to a five-person limit.

* * * *

The Department of Agriculture ran into trouble with the American Carnation Society the other day and had to rename three new prize varieties. To most persons carnations all look alike except that some are white, some are pink, and some are red and on St. Patrick's Day they have green ones. But the American Carnation Society has a pedigree book listing more than 1,100 named varieties.

Recently the Department of Agriculture developed three new kinds. They picked out names for them and were feeling quite proudly about it when the American Carnation Society hit the ceiling. They already had attached those names to old varieties. One, the Shepherdess, was officially named in 1884—before Secretary Wallace was born.

Meekly the department experts called a conference, consulted the pedigree book and thought up three names that hadn't been used—Rigoletto, Mavourneen and Carlotta. They had so much trouble that they are thinking of hiring a name expert—probably one of the men who finds names for Pullman cars.

It just shows that the Government can't do anything without stepping on somebody's toes.

* * * *

Perhaps it is hardly worth mentioning, but it was one of those trivial incidents which lodges itself in your mind and hangs on like a fragment of music. An old man was trying to sell a bedraggled bunch of flowers on a downtown corner last night. Crowds brushed by. No one, after a glance at the flowers, even paused.

Unable to sell them, the old man saw a little girl, about the size of Shirley Temple, standing on the corner with her mother, and he drew a flower from his stock and hesitatingly walked over to hand it to the little girl. Her mother drew her away, and shook her head. The child hesitated and the old man pressed the flower into her hand, bowed and shuffled away.

It seemed a little strange in Washington to see anyone giving something away—that is anything of his own.

* * * *

There's one man in Washington who insists that Vice President Garner was for the Patman bonus bill. He argued the point with a friend.

"Of course Garner was for it," he insisted. "I saw pictures in the newspapers of him signing it. If he wasn't for it he would have done like President Roosevelt and vetoed it."

Racer Is Found Dead; Official Blames Poison

Detroit, May 24 (AP).—Jesse L. Brewer, 34-year-old race driver who had planned to compete in the Memorial Day race at Indianapolis, was found dead today in the apartment of his estranged wife, Mrs. Margaret Brewer.

Foster J. Knobloch, deputy coroner, said he had taken poison after an unsuccessful attempt to effect a reconciliation with his wife.

Works-Relief Loans, Grants Are Liberalized

The President Takes Final Step in Setting Wheels Into Motion.

Taking the final major step necessary to throw the works-relief program into high gear, President Roosevelt yesterday liberalized the loan and grant terms on non-Federal projects by reducing the interest rate and increasing by 50 per cent the amount of the Federal grant.

On recommendation of the Advisory Allotment Board, the President prescribed that funds would be advanced to States, municipalities, their political subdivisions, the District of Columbia and self-liquidating projects of public bodies of these governments on the basis of a 55 per cent loan and a 45 per cent outright grant. The loan would be subject to 3 per cent annual interest.

Under the old PWA procedure the outright grant for non-Federal projects was only 30 per cent, while the loan for the remaining 70 per cent was subject of an interest rate of 4 per cent annually.

Held Unusually Liberal.

The new terms were regarded as unusually liberal and it was believed would attract many bids from State and municipal governments for Federal advances. Few municipalities are able to borrow funds, even in the existing cheap money market, for less than 4 per cent and few States can get money for as low as 3 per cent.

Thus the way is opened for a greater cooperation by non-Federal agencies with the work relief program. The allotment advisory board, in announcing the decision, pointed out its "action is designated to make it easier for communities to borrow funds on collateral from PWA instead of requesting outright all-Federal grants, thus helping to carry out the President's objective of seeing as large a portion as possible of the funds returned to the Treasury."

"The change in terms recommended," the statement continued, "opens the way for communities to obtain projects of the type that are permanent assets for their localities which otherwise they would have difficulty in obtaining unless they undertake to share with the Federal Government the financial burden."

Types of Projects Listed.

Projects such as construction of schools, hospitals, waterworks, buildings, sewers and similar types would be eligible for the loans and grants. The works act ear-marked $900,000,000 for loans and grants to States and their political subdivisions. The President has authority to increase this sum to $1,700,000,000 in his direction.

With the decisions regarding allocations of the huge $4,000,000,000 works fund already made, the program has reached a point where steam shovels will soon send dirt flying and thousands of idle men and women will be employed. Work will first get under way on the $1,000,000,000 of Federal projects already approved and the path is now clear for applications from States and municipalities.

Meanwhile, Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins divided the 48 States into 307 work-relief districts. He said local district and State works progress officers would have to carry the full responsibility of administering affairs within their jurisdictions.

How Districts Were Formed.

Four States—Delaware, Vermont, New Hampshire and Rhode Island—each constitute a single district. In other States groups of counties are combined to make a district. None of the districts cross State lines.

The districts were chosen on the basis of the number of families in a given area; quick and adequate transportation and communication; and economy and efficiency of headquarters. Headquarters were chosen, wherever possible, in communities were personnel will be available and offices can be established efficiently and economically.

The personnel set-up makes the State works progress administrators responsible to Hopkins and the district administrators responsible to the State administrators.

Hopkins' announcement said the set-up "will make for economy and practical working efficiency" in such functions as:

"Coordinating the works program as a whole so as to move from the relief rolls to work projects or in private employment the maximum number of persons in the shortest time possible;

"Investigating to insure honest execution of the program;

"Providing uniform reports on progress, recommending measures to remove delay or terminate projects not providing sufficient employment."

Landing in France Holds German Flier

Avesnes, France, May 24 (AP).—A German student flier who spent last night under arrest at the customs office here for landing on French soil, after flying over frontier fortifications, had to stay here tonight as well because he lacked funds to refuel his plane.

The flier, Adolf Bauer, from Dusseldorf, was seized by French peasants when he came down near here, and was held for the gendarmes.

Bauer, who was fined 50 francs (about $3.30), told authorities he was lost in a fog. He said he thought he was over The Netherlands.

French officials said they were convinced of Bauer's good faith.

Hopkins Grants 5 Million to End Illinois Crisis

Administrator Denies He'll Relinquish Control of Relief in Ohio.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 24.—Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins temporarily solved the Illinois relief crisis today with a promise to Gov. Henry Horner of an immediate $5,000,000 grant to be administered by the State.

In contrast to his amicable conference with the Illinois Governor, Hopkins told an audience of more than 1,000 Cleveland citizens that "in my capacity as Federal Relief Administrator I took the responsibility of administering relief in Ohio and I have no intention whatever of giving it back."

He took cognizance of Gov. Martin L. Davey's criminal libel charges, withdrawn by the Ohio Governor Wednesday, with the statement, "Since I came here I have heard rumors that the Governor's action in lifting the libel action was the result of a political deal. In language as explicit as I can make it, I will say there has been no understanding of any kind with anyone in Washington."

Gov. Davey brought the action several weeks ago after Hopkins ordered an investigation of alleged "shake-down" tactics in administration of Ohio relief.

"I was told not to come to Ohio," Hopkins said. "But I am here."

Gov. Horner, after his conference with Hopkins, said the $5,000,000 will be turned over to the Governor's office and the State commission to meet the crisis as far as possible until Illinois begins to collect, probably in July, the first of a $20,000,000 anticipated revenue from a one-cent increase in the sales tax. Relief officials in Washington indicated the transfer would be made tomorrow.

Gov. Horner said Hopkins did not insist Illinois match the allotment.

"He knows our situation and that we can not pay," Gov. Horner said.

The Governor explained the sales tax law and a pending utilities sales tax bill will enable the State to raise $26,000,000 to provide most of the State's share in the $12,000,000 monthly relief load.

Hopkins' address included a sweeping defense of the work-relief program.

"It is peculiar that our critics don't jump on us at our most vulnerable point—inadequacy," he said. "You can put all the chiselers in your hat. For every person on the relief rolls who should not be there, there are two not on the rolls who should be."

Two hundred pickets describing themselves as members of the Cleveland Unemployed Council marched under Hopkins' hotel window for two hours chanting, "Hopkins—see our committee." He finally assented, but told them he could not meet their demands for a 30 per cent increase in food appropriations, union wages and other relief changes.

Wheel Chair 'Truant' Just Visiting Friends

By the Associated Press.

Uniontown, Pa., May 24.—Louis Moralt, crippled former miner, who "ran away" in his wheel chair Wednesday, was located today with friends—eight miles from his home near Point Marion.

"I just had to do something—go somewhere," Moralt explained after he was found at the home of Joe Ellinger at Greensboro, Greene County. "I just wanted to go for a little visit. I didn't mean to cause such ructions."

He suffered a broken back in a mine accident 10 years ago and since that time has lived with his brother, Frank, and the latter's family.

Ellinger telephoned Frank today that Moralt was with him. Frank came for his brother and took him home in a truck.

Rate Reduced On Long-Term Homes Credits

Federal Home Loan Board Lowers Charge From 3½% to 3%.

In line with the Administration's downward revision of interest rates, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board yesterday cut from 3½ to 3 per cent the amount it charges on long-term loans to its 3,260 member institutions.

The interest rate on short-term loans, up to one year, was reduced to 3 per cent on May 1. The amount of Home Loan Bank advances now approximates $74,000,000, an increase of about $2,000,000 in the last month.

Meantime, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, an affiliated Federal agency, is awaiting the signing of the bill giving $1,750,000,000 additional credit for the relief of mortgage-ridden home owners.

The bill has been approved by both houses of Congress and only the formal signature of President Roosevelt remains before new funds will be released for this purpose.

Innocuous Pact Set For World Wheat

Provision for Government Control Suspended.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 24.—The shortest wheat conference since international efforts to boost prices began two years ago ended tonight after finally agreeing to extension for one year of the world wheat pact with all government control undertaking suspended indefinitely.

Tentatively accepted yesterday, the extension plan was drafted in final form today and will immediately be submitted to the 21 signatory governments. Their approval was held certain since recommendations were so innocuous.

The world wheat pact, already wrecked by Argentina's repudiation of its export quota provisions, was scheduled to expire August 1.

A provisional agreement under which France will be granted an additional export quota of 11,000,000 bushels of millable wheat up to August 1, 1936, in addition to the 11,000,000-bushel quota for the year ending August 1, 1935, was reached at this afternoon's session.

The rate of home loans has been steadily declining, but a sharp pick-up is expected after the new credit is made available.

Hoover Brands NRA as Fascist In New Attack

Labor Will Repudiate Act, Ex-President Says in Reply to Green.

By the Associated Press.

Palo Alto, Calif., May 24.—Launching a new attack on the Blue Eagle, former President Hoover today described use of "bureaucratic coercion" and the "boycott" to enforce the NRA as "not American" and predicted labor would not long stand for monopolistic and Fascist practices.

The statement, bristling with condemnation of the Administration's national recovery measure, did not mention William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, but it was issued in reply to criticisms he had made of Mr. Hoover's views regarding the NRA as expressed in an interview May 15.

Mr. Hoover's pronouncement read:

Extols Child Labor Abolition.

"American labor will not long stand for price fixing, limitations of output, stifling of competition or any other of the monopolistic and Fascist practices inherent in the NRA. Its enforcement by bureaucratic coercion, intimidation and boycott is not American.

"If all these things are liberal and progressive, we need some new definition of these terms.

"The purposes of the act so far as it abolishes sweating through minimum wages and hours, and so far as it abolishes child labor are right.

"But they should be accomplished by other than Fascist methods if they are to be truly liberal and progressive."

Scored "Intimidation."

In the interview criticized by Green, the former President charged the NRA was crushing the life out of small business and that the act itself was a "cloak for conspiracy against the public interest." He said the NRA was retarding recovery, accused it of being used as a weapon for the "intimidation of decent citizens" and said that Congress should abolish it completely.

Green's retort was:

"As for labor, we will follow Roosevelt and not Hoover."

The former President's statement was issued just in advance of his departure by automobile for Des Moines, Iowa, to deliver the commencement day address at Drake University.

Johnson Attacks Senate NRA Extension

Harris & Ewing.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, first administrator of NRA (left), yesterday told the House Ways and Means Committe that the Senate NRA extension resolution would kill NRA after ten months. He said it would be a catastrophe to accept it. He is shown with Chairman Doughton.

Way Is Cleared For NRA Action By the House

Slight Concession Seen Likely for Senate's Extension Views.

Robinson, Democratic leader; Speaker Byrns, Senator Harrison, chairman of the Finance Committee, and Representative Doughton, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

Senator Robinson said the group discussed with the President the general legislative situation but that no conclusions were reached.

Conferees Draft Changes.

In the second group were Secretary Perkins, Senator Wagner, Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board; Harold M. Stephens, Assistant Attorney General; Sidney Hillman, a member of the NIRB; John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and Green. This group discussed the Wagner bill and after the conference with the President went to work writing the proposed amendments.

Secretary Perkins said the amendments made corrections in the language of the bill to provide harmony between this bill and NRA and to conform with certain court decisions. Asked if the Administration favored the bill, Miss Perkins replied: "I favor it."

She added, however, that she believed it should place authority in the Labor Department rather than in a separate board.

Richberg said that the conference discussed "tying the bills together" to supplement each other.

Green said he believed the President was "sympathetic and favorable to the act proposed by Senator Wagner." The President later confirmed this statement at his press conference.

Green added that he felt much more hopeful than when he made the general strike threat in his New York speech.

Efforts at composing the differences between the Senate and the House on NRA are expected to continue. With only three weeks left before June 16, when NRA expires, there is the ever-present danger that its opponents in the Senate may succeed in delaying action until after that date. There also still is involved the question of the Supreme Court ruling on NRA constitutionality. This ruling may come Monday.

Green Talks of Strife.

As the first witness of the day before the Ways and Means Committee, Green repeated "that in my opinion failure to enact NRA for two years would result in strikes and strife on a Nation-wide basis."

"If Congress fails us, we will resort to a mobilization of our economic strength," he added. He pointed out that labor meetings urging NRA extension are being held "in every city, town and hamlet in America."

Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, told Green he felt his statement was "somewhat along the lines of government by coercion."

"What kind of government are we going to have if everybody is given everything he asks for?" he asked.

Green replied that "we want to show Congress that we are not bluffing." He said some members had expressed doubt of the sincerity of the labor organization leaders. Green said he had meant by his statements "that we will strike to correct economic wrongs."

Pressed further, Green asked the committee to consider the circumstances under which his statements were made. He said he was speaking before the greatest gathering he had ever addressed and that his speech was extemporaneous.

Green Calls for Honesty.

In opening his remarks Green said he "would prefer that Congress be honest with the people and with labor rather than that it try to deceive us by extending the NRA only 10 months."

He condemned as "shortsighted, reactionary and anti-social" groups seeking to destroy NRA. He predicted that unemployment would increase by leaps and bounds without NRA. Green said he was convinced that there is some method by which workers can be protected even though they are not employed by concerns engaged in interstate commerce. He pleaded for Government regulation of all types of business and industry.

"Organized labor," he said, "is behind the extension of the NRA to all industry, whether it be technically called interstate or intrastate."

Following Green on the stand, Lewis said he approved everything Green had said. Most of his short statement was devoted to a plea for enactment of the Guffey bill, which he said is necessary for protection of miners.

Lewis said that in recent months there had been a breakdown in the competitive situation in the coal industry, and that there had been little or no observation of NRA price agreements. He added that without assurance that NRA will be continued there is no possibility of miners and operators reaching an agreement and that the miners would refuse to work after June 16, when the present agreement expires.

Code Lapses Blamed.

Lewis said the present situation had been brought about by inability of NRA to enforce code provisions. He pointed particularly to the Kentucky decision which held NRA unconstitutional and enjoined coal code enforcement.

Gen. Johnson, after referring to nine and a half months' continuance of NRA as a "catastrophe," declared that such a move would bring a "council of chaos" and a "universe of uncertainty."

Johnson described Hoover's statement opposing NRA as "epithet used as argument."

"Anything that Mr. Hoover stands for is American, but anything the New Deal stands for is Fascist. His statement that NRA is crushing small business has been refuted time and again.

'He ought to know that his own policies very nearly crushed the life out of the whole Nation."

Lewis, commenting on the Hoover statement, said:

"If ever there was a man who was discredited by the people and who ought to withhold his personal opinion, it is Herbert Hoover."

Bill to Expand TVA Hits Snag In Committee

12-13 Vote Blocks Measure but Leaders Won't Admit Defeat.

Warren Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey.

David Lilienthal, TVA director, made a flat denial of all charges of irregularities and said the only contracts let without competitive bidding were those of an emergency nature.

The United Press learned last night that a motion will be made to reconsider today's vote when the committee meets next week. Administration forces, it was reported, will offer a compromise whereby part of the TVA activities will be placed under the jurisdiction of McCarl's office. In addition, it was said, the New Dealers will agree to a proposal which would forbid the TVA from interfering with the Mellon-owned aluminum projects on the Little Tennessee River.

If such a compromise fails, Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, who has been waging a strong fight in committee for the Administration's program, will offer a petition on the floor to discharge the committee from further consideration of the measure. If 218 Representatives sign the petition, the bill would be brought directly before the House.

Petition Prepared.

"I have no intention of permitting this bill to be bottled up in committee," Maverick said last night. "I have the petition all prepared in my pocket. I have not been asked to offer it. If I do so, I do it on my own, because I feel that the TVA is a great project—one that only the Government can undertake."

Some New Dealers claimed last night that party leaders and even the White House failed to act to preserve the legislation after being informed that the committee was likely to take advarse action. President Roosevelt was reported to have ordered his contact man, former Representative Charles West (Democrat), Ohio, into action two weeks ago when the attitude of the committee was conveyed to the White House.

On the eve of the vote, it was said, additional representations were made to the White House for aid. If any action was taken it was unsuccessful. Six Democrats joined with the seven Republican members on the committee to table the legislation, while 11 Democrats and 1 Farmer-Laborite voted to report it favorably.

Despite attempts by Chairman John McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, of the committee, to keep the roll call a secret, the United Press learned that members voted as follows:

To table: Democrats (6)—May, Monlet, Smith, Edmunston, Harter, Scheffer. Republicans (7)—Ransley, Andrews, McLean, Plumley, Collins, Short, Arends.

To report favorably: Democrats (11)—McSwain, Hill, Thomason, Rogers, Faddis, Merritt, Maverick, Dorsey, Costello, Wilcox, Turner. Farmer-Labor (1)—Kvale.

Riff Is Widened By Peek's New Trade Tirade

Reciprocal Agreements Assailed by President's Adviser in St. Louis.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

A militant attack on the Hull-Wallace foreign trade program was made in a speech at St. Louis last night by George N. Peek, the President's special adviser on foreign trade, which raised the question in many minds as to how long this open branch will be permitted to continue.

Declaring that "foreign nations need no guardian," he struck out inferentially at the whole philosopny behind the New Deal effort to promote greater exports by admitting more imports. Boldly, he assailed the reciprocal trade agreements now being negotiated by the State Department.

Mr. Peek's views were presented at a dinner of the sixth Central Mississippi Valley Foreign Trade Conference. His speech carried to even greater lengths the disagreement he has hitherto expressed with the Administration's foreign trade policies.

Resulted in Shift.

It was a fundamental difference of opinion in respect to the AAA that resulted last year in the shifting of Mr. Peek from the leadership of that agency to the relatively inactive post of foreign trade adviser, observers recalled.

Again, he finds himself in disagreement, not only with Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace, but also with Secretary of State Cordell Hull. In the first instance, Wallace was the victor. Consistently, the President has upheld the hand of Secretary Hull. Thus, from the start, Peek has been waging a lonely battle.

In view of the rapidity with which the White House has acted to end all other rifts within the Administration, and the further fact that Mr. Peek's appointment expires on June 16, the belief was that a showdown is at hand. Moreover, Republicans on Capitol Hill have been making increasingly frequent use of the Peek figures and arguments, and this is believed not to have passed unnoticed.

Castle Supports Hull.

Meantime, support for the Hull policies came from William R. Castle, jr., Undersecretary of State in the Hoover Administration. Expressing himself in accord with the foreign trade program of Secretary Hull, he added, "in fact, I am in accord with most things he does."

Another development in the foreign trade situation yesterday was a visit to the State Department by Soviet Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky. After an hour's talk with R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State, and Robert F. Kelley, chief of the Eastern European Division, the ambassador expressed hope of an improvement in trade relations between the two countries.

The conference, he intimated, concerned means by which the Soviet Union might be included in the scope of the foreign trade program. The discussion did not progress far enough to be considered preliminary negotiations for a trade pact, but, it was indicated, that may be the objective irrespective of the failure of the Russian debt negotiations.

Mr. Peek in his speech stood pat on the position he took in his April 30 letter to the President, that "an increase of dollar exchange in favor of foreigners . . . does not necessarily mean a proportionate increase in our export of commodities."

Opposition View.

It has been the theory of the Hull-Wallace program that exports can be stimulated only in proportion to the amount of goods the United States will accept from other nations. In opposition to this view, Peek declared that the world as a whole had a surplus of dollar exchange amounting to almost $1,000,000,000 last year, yet most of this sum found its way into capital transactions.

"I stand on my report," he declared.

Continuing, he asserted that "the potential markets for many American goods are as good as ever . . . Our method must be one of realistic negotiation with our prospective customers, country by country, and when necessary, product by product."

This was tantamount to rejection of the "most-favored nation" doctrine of the State Department, which gives to all countries the benefits conferred by negotiation to any one. As an example of what he wanted, Peek mentioned the Cuban pact, a special bilateral agreement.

Reaffirming his disagreement with Secretary Hull on the subject of "barter" deals, Peek said:

"It is admittedly a cumbersome and unsatisfactory method of conducting trade, but it is infinitely better than foregoing it, and its potential benefits should not be ignored."

"Realistic Action."

Further along in his speech, he asserted that "generally speaking, private interests have been more alert than our Government to recognize and adapt themselves to changed conditions in foreign trade." The growth of economic nationalism abroad "calls for practical, realistic action," he argued, in criticizing by inference the Hull theories. A five-point program was advocated by the foreign trade adviser:

1. Government backing for American exporters in line with activities of the Export-Import Banks.

2. Government action to eliminate the problem of foreign "blocked exchange."

3. Up-to-date bookkeeping on financial relations with each individual country.

4. Establishment of a permanent "board of foreign trade" to coordinate policies.

5. Adoption of a policy of "selective" exports and imports.

"Much has been said as to the necessity of accepting more imports as a matter of national policy," he declared. "Perhaps we should, but I believe that in any case we as a Nation should decide for ourselves what imports we will take, for what purpose, in what quantities, and from what countries, in exchange for the goods we send abroad in our national interest."

Germans in America Safe From Draft

U. S. Citizens and Permanent Residents Exempt.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 24.—Germans having American citizenship and Germans residing permanently in the United States need not fear they will be drafted into the Reich's new conscript army, the government said today.

There were so many queries from foreign countries as to the implications of the new conscription law just issued that an official explanation was issued.

The statement called attention to the fact that, under no circumstances, are persons who do not possess German citizenship subject to the draft. Hence, it said, American citizens of German descent can not be drafted.

Furthermore, Germans permanently residing abroad stand in no danger of being called to the colors even though they visit the Fatherland during 1935.

"For technical reasons," the statement said, "these will not be drafted this year."

Roosevelt Hits Again at Bonus, Hopes Glimmer

President Warns He Will Veto Security Bill if Rider Is Attached.

By Robert C. Albright.

The drive for cash payment of the bonus suffered another damaging setback last night, with President Roosevelt, flushed from his veto victory, again wielding the big stick.

The President served notice he will veto even his comprehensive social security program, if a cash bonus measure is attached to it as a rider. Coincidentally, prominent veterans' bloc leaders virtually conceded defeat.

A movement was gathering force in the Senate to amend the social security measure with a compromise bonus bill, providing alternative methods of payment by a bond issue, new currency or a works fund allotment.

The President said he considered the social security bill, carrying old age pensions, unemployment insurance and State health aids, the most important single piece of pending legislation. He said he wanted no extraneous matter attached to it.

Thomas Sees Defeat.

"That means he will veto any cash bonus legislation that is offered on any bill," Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, leader of the bonus-expansionist forces," observed last night.

"To my mind it also means that there is very little chance of getting any acceptable bonus measure through the present session of Congress.

"I haven't given up the fight, but I must admit that I am now doubtful of success. If a majority of both houses would alone assure enactment, we might win. But we have not two-thirds of the Senate to pass any bonus bill over a veto."

Meantime the nucleus of a new bonus army started mobilizing in Los Angeles for another bonus march on Washington. Marchers were recruited in the face of repeated admonitions from officials of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars. James E. Van Zandt, commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, sought vainly to nip the movement. Commander Frank Belgrano, of the American Legion, said he viewed such a march as "most un-American."

United Press dispatches from Los Angeles said tented headquarters were established there, and recruiting was well under way.

Spurns Compromise.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware, in a discussion of the recent farmers' march on Washington, told the Senate he would be surprised "if within a week the soldiers aren't marching on Washington."

In authoritative Capitol quarters it was said that the only bonus bill the President would approve is the so-called Harrison compromise, maturing veterans' certificates about 1942, and providing partial immediate pay-off on a present value basis.

"We would never accept that," was the comment of Thomas. "That gives the veterans nothing. They want full payment."

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, who drafted this plan, has made no move for revival since the Senate turned it down for the Patman bill. Indications are that he will not revive it unless the veterans agree to go along.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, around whose three-pointed bonus compromise the next veterans' drive appeared likely to center, yesterday withdrew his motion to offer the plan as an amendment to the naval appropriations bill just before that measure passed the Senate.

He was considering offering the compromise as an amendment either to the social security bill or to legislative appropriations. He had reached no final conclusion when the President flung his veto threat at the proposal.

Clark Bill's Provisions.

The Clark measure makes bonus payment mandatory, but permits use of either the Patman or Vinson methods, or works fund appropriations, in carrying it out.

His bill could be attached to the social security program by a simple majority vote. There was some speculation last night on whether some opponents of the social security program might seize on the veterans' veto warning as an opportunity to kill the bill with the bonus rider.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, militant force behind the rejected Patman bill, meanwhile were considering ways and means of enacting new bonus legislation. Commander Belgrano of the legion sent Commander in Chief Van Zandt of the V. F. W. the following wire:

"It is the intention of the American Legion to continue its fight for full and immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates."

According to the United Press, Royal Robertson, a leader in the 1932 bonus march, was mobilizing the Los Angeles contingent of the latest march. He said he hoped to start tonight with 2,000 Los Angeles veterans. There were some defections in the ranks and appeals for the marchers to carry on their fight through the ballot box rather than a Washington crusade.

Another March Threat.

An Associated Press report from New York quoted Ralph Dalton, national president of the Hobo Fellowship, as saying veterans in that organization are mobilizing a bonus march to Washington on or before June 3. He said the Fellowship will keep 5,000 veterans in Washington until the bonus is paid.

One of the first repercussions from the Senate's rejection of the Patman bonus bill came from Prescott, Ariz., where the Associated Press said petitions for the recall of Senator Carl Hayden are being circulated. The petitions charge Hayden with opposition not only to the bonus bill, but to the Townsend $200-a-month old-age pension plan.

Crime Findings Meet Setback And a Victory

Committee Raises Retiring Age, Exempting Brown, Headley, Bean.

By James D. Secrest.

The sub-committee on crime of the House District Committee yesterday won a partial victory and at the same time suffered a temporary setback as the committee met for the third time without acting on the whole report.

While approving the first three of six sections of the report, the committee by a close vote took the heart out of the section dealing with the Metropolitan Police Department by raising the recommended retirement age for the "high command" from 60 to 65 years.

The effect of this amendment, if retained, would mean that none of the "high command" need be retired as Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Inspectors Albert J. Headley and Thaddeus Bean are all between 60 and 65 years of age.

Headley would be affected by the amendment, however, within two months as he will reach 65 on July 21. Maj. Brown is 61, and Bean, who already has indicated his intention of retiring this summer, is 62. The District Commissioners, under present police regulations, may retire any officer who has reached the age of 60 at their discretion.

Randolph Forecasts Defeat.

Chairman Jennings Randolph, of the sub-committee, declined to comment on this unexpected upset, but it is known that the sub-committee is confident it will be able to defeat this amendment when the complete report is voted on by the committee.

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, colleague of the sub-committee's bitterest critic—Representative Thomas L. Blanton—offered the amendment and put it over by a margin of 1 vote.

The victory was merely technical, however, as Randolph had two written proxies that would have swung the vote his way. Patman raised a parliamentary point of order and the votes were not accepted. The proxies had been submitted by Representatives Reuben Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, and Dewey Short (Republican), of Missouri.

No Other Alterations.

No other alterations were made in the first three sections of the report, and it was reported there was an overwhelming sentiment in favor of retaining the paragraph censuring Inspector Headley and the famed "gentlemen's agreement" with Representative Blanton.

The fact that the full committee approved these three sections was interpreted as a defeat for the dissenting members of the sub-committee who are sponsoring a minority report.

These two members, Representatives Theodore Werner (Democrat), of South Dakota, and Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, were present, but the minority report was not even considered.

The committee adjourned to meet at the call of Chairman Mary T. Norton. Only one more seriously controversial section remains to be dealt with, and that is the recommendation that United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and his aid, Karl Kindleberger, be replaced.

Hearing Motion Rejected.

Indicative of approval of this section, however, is the fact that the committee voted yesterday to reject a motion by Patman that Garnett be given a hearing before the full committee. This hearing had been requested by the Virginia delgation.

Included in the police section, as adopted, is the recommendation that the United States Park Police be absorbed by the Metropolitan Police Department. This proposal also has been condemned by Blanton in a speech on the House floor.

The first section of the report merely explains the origin and work of the sub-committee, while the second section cites figures in support of the contention that crime conditions in Washington are abnormal. It also proposes legislation relating to gambling, vice and minor offenses, and auto thefts.

Once the report is approved by the full District committee there is little that opponents of it can do about it. No action by the House is necessary, nor will any be asked. Several members, however, may take the floor to discuss and defend the sub-committee's findings.

14 Members Attend.

Copies of the recommendations that Garnett and the "high command" be removed from office will be sent the proper officials, and the sub-committee will then wash its hands of the inquiry while waiting to see whether its recommendations are carried out.

Only 14 of the 21 members of the full committee were present yesterday, but all members of the sub-committee except Representative Clare G. Fenerty (Republican), of Pennsylvania, were on hand.

After the meeting Mrs. Jenckes, who had previously turned against the majority report after approving it in executive session, introduced a bill in the House to require the Commissioners to select the superintendent of police from among the assistant superintendents and inspectors.

The inspectors must have had five years' actual street service and come up from the ranks. Mrs. Jenckes has offered a similar bill relative to the Fire Department.

MRS. GRACE STANSBURY.

Woman Shoots Aged Mother; Inquiry Begun

Daughter Is Held in Bond as Principals Tell Varied Stories.

A 70-year-old woman was in Providence Hospital last night in a critical condition from a bullet wound inflicted by her daughter. The shooting apparently was accidental.

The victim is Mrs. Josephine Smallwood, of 212 Sixty-first street, Capitol Heights, Md.

The daughter, Mrs. Grace Stansbury, 46, of the same address, is held in $500 bond for hearing June 6 before Police Judge George B. Merrick.

Discrepancies in stories told by Mrs. Smallwood, Mrs. Stansbury, her husband and Melvin Linkins, 20, of 209 Sixty-first street, who also was in the house when the shooting occurred, were explained by Sergt. Arthur W. Hepburn, of Prince Georges County police, as the result of excitement and worry.

Mrs. Smallwood said at the hospital that she and her daughter were doing their spring housecleaning, with the help of Linkins, who was bringing trash and unused furniture and clothing from the attic.

"The gun was in an old satchel," she said. "It had been put away for 18 years or more. I don't know just how it happened, but I must have pushed the gun or something. Anyway, it went off. It was purely accidental and everything is all right now."

Her 5-year-old grandson was playing at the end of her hospital bed and she warned him not to shake it.

Mrs. Stansbury told police she was holding the gun when it fired and that she thought it was unloaded.

Linkins said he was not in the room when the shooting occurred. He said he was coming downstairs with another load from the attic when he heard a shot. Then, he said, he heard Mrs. Smallwood cry out:

"My God, Grace, what have you done to me."

The husband, Joseph Stansbury, said that both he and Linkins were in the room and that there were two guns. He said his wife had both guns and several old pictures in her hands and, even though heavily laden, was snapping both pistols. Finally, he said, one of them fired.

He could not remember her exact words, but believed his wife had just said, "This is the way they do it in Northeast," and was under the impression she was explaining to her mother just how the guns worked.

The bullet entered Mrs. Smallwood's left shoulder, about 2 inches below the collarbone, and traveled downward.

Mrs. Stansbury remained at the hospital until Fifth Precinct police took her in custody with Linkins. Linkins was released and bond was set for Mrs. Stansbury.

Power Rate Hearing Off Until Next Week

Baltimore, May 24.—The public service commission today adjourned until Monday its hearing on the rates, valuation and affairs of the Conowingo Power Co. The hearing began last Monday and probably will continue another week or more.

Theodore E. Seelye, vice president of a Philadelphia engineering concern, testified at today's session he believed the "fair value" of the company to be $1,150,000, and that he believed it entitled to a return of not less than 7 per cent.

Vanderbilt Heir Divorcee Kills Self

Keeping two doors from Mrs. Whitfield's bedroom and that Chevret dashed into the room and took the weapon from the dead woman's hand.

When he shouted to Chevret to leave everything alone, Segura added, the latter dropped the weapon.

"I was excited and didn't know what I was doing," Chevret testified.

Chevret said he did not hear any shot and knew nothing of the death of Mrs. Whitfield until he was awakened by Segura.

The body was brought here by an undertaker, but plans for an autopsy were abandoned.

Suit Instituted February 21.

Henry Blatman, an attorney, said Whitfield had been in Hollywood, but would come here by plane. Mrs. Whitfield's divorce suit, originally instituted in Santa Fe February 21, was transfered here.

Mrs. Whitfield, the daughter of the present Mrs. Horace Chase Stebbins, recently had returned from a visit to New York, whose social whirl she virtually had deserted when she married Whitfield.

The couple had lived close to their ranch for a period and friends had thought Mrs. Whitfield happily absorbed with the simple life of the isolated estate until she started her divorce suit.

A young daughter, born of her 1923 to 1927 marriage to Vanderbilt, also survives Mrs. Whitfield. The marriage to Vanderbilt, son of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Lusitania victim, was a social headlight of its season. Her marriage to Sigourney Thayer, society theatrical figure, lasted slightly more than a year.

George B. M. Fenwick Will Be Buried Today

Funeral services for George B. McClellan Fenwick, 70, retired employe of the Interior Department and a lifelong resident of Washington, will be held at his residence, 1502 Seventeenth street northwest, today at 11 a. m., followed by burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Fenwick died at his home Wednesday, after a brief illness. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Carolyn Fenwick. A daughter, Mrs. Gertrude F. Larcombe, died some time ago.

Parley Is Held On Move to End Bridge Tolls

Martinsburg Delegation Consults Senators on Williamsport Project.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 24.—A committee representing a local citizens' organization seeking abolition of tolls on the bridge across the Potomac at Williamsport, Md., returned from a conference in Washington with Senator Neely, of West Virginia, and Senator Radcliff, of Maryland. They reported an encouraging response. The committee included J. Nelson Hicks, chairman of the citizens' group here, and Attorney W. W. Downey.

They reported Neely has assembled considerable data on the question. He promised full cooperation and indicated that funds to acquire the bridge could be obtained from Reconstruction Finance Corporation, provided the RFC could be shown the feasibility of the undertaking. The committee said there is every reason to believe this can be done.

Later, Senator Neely arranged for a conference with Senator Radcliff, who also promised his cooperation. The annual average income of the bridge company is approximately $90,000, Downey told Senator Radcliff. The Senators were assured the bridge would pay for itself in not more than five years. It is understood that the bridge company submitted a price of $350,000 to the two State road commissions a few years ago.

The West Virginia highway commission already is in accord and an effort is to be made to arouse the interest of nearby Maryland sections in the proposition, as the Maryland road commission will also play an important part in negotiations. In keeping with this idea, a meeting is to be held tonight in Hagerstown, Md., to which residents of Williamsport have been invited. A Martinsburg delegation will go to Hagerstown.

It was suggested that the Governors of Maryland and West Virginia appoint committees to furnish data through their Senators to the RFC, showing to what extent the bridge will be self-liquidating.

Experts Study Mental Hygiene Of the Jobless

Local Institute Uses Unemployment as Conference Theme.

Stressing the psychological side of unemployment, the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene held its annual conference yesterday in the auditorium of the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Miss Maude Alton, director of Americanization work in the public schools, related problems of adult education as regards life adjustments, and Miss Hilda Smith, of the FERA, and Miss Lillian Burns, of the Family Service Association, talked of psychological readjustments which must be made with joblessness. Heading the discussion group was Mrs. Richard Hogue.

Drs. Roscoe Hall, John Lind and Samuel Silk supervised clinical demonstrations in St. Elizabeths Hospital. The doctors tried particularly to bring out the significance of personality traits in interviewing patients.

Emotional hazards to children from certain types of radio programs also came up for discussion yesterday afternoon, the speakers being Dr. Winifred Richmond, St. Elizabeths Hospital psychiatrist; Dr. Paul J. W. Ewerhardt, director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, and Dr. Tracy F. Tyler, secretary of the National Committee on Education by Radio.

The annual conference was opened with a dinner at the Cosmos Club Thursday evening, with Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, presiding and delivering the principal address.

Ezell was treated at the Naval Hospital for lacerations to the lip and mouth. His wife, Clara, 19, received treatment at Emergency Hospital for minor cuts to the leg. Douglas H. Smith, 35, of the 3500 block of Sixteenth street northwest, was treated at Emergency. His nose was badly cut.

Capper Acts to Keep Apartments Heated

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, yesterday reintroduced in the Senate a bill to require landlords to furnish heat in apartments of not less than 68 degrees between 7 a. m. and 10 p. m. A similar measure was offered last session.

Capper's bill, which is an outgrowth of an investigation of rental conditions by James Ring under direction of the Senate District Committee, would also apply to lessors and sub-lessors.

It carries a penalty of fines from $25 to $100. The District health officer would be the administering agent.

Nolan Boy Rallies After Operation

Culver Student Brought to Hospital by Plane.

Thirteen-year-old John S. Nolan, the youngest cadet in the famous Culver Military Academy Black Horse Troop, was recovering at Georgetown University Hospital last night, following an operation for appendicitis, performed late Thursday after he had been brought to Washington in a plane chartered by himself in South Bend, Ind.

The youngster, son of William J. Nolan, 2023 Kalorama road, president of the Nolan Motor Co., being informed by academy physicians that an operation was necessary, obtained the plane. The operation was performed by his family physician, Dr. George Tully Vaughn.

Young Weaver was in considerable pain during the latter part of his sky journey, and a heavy opiate was administered to him by his nurse to ease his suffering.

Naval Reserve To Take Cruise On Battleship

Washington, Richmond, Baltimore Units Will Embark at Annapolis.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 24.—While all other Naval Reserve units along the Atlantic Coast are training aboard destroyers, as usual, this summer, those from Washington, Richmond and Baltimore will make their annual 15-day training cruise aboard a battleship—the Wyoming.

The plan is for these units to embark and disembark at Annapolis. They are to sail September 7, which allows the Wyoming several days to take on supplies after completing a cruise to Europe with midshipmen, the latter sailing from Annapolis in June.

While diplomatic arrangements have not been completed, the Navy Department expects to make Halifax a "liberty port" of the reservists' cruise, according to information received by the commanding officer of the Baltimore battlion, Lieut. Comdr. A. M. Norris.

Three years ago the Baltimore divisions cruised to Bermuda, spending four days there and steaming five days each way to allow time for performance of ship drills. It is said the department considered Port au Prince and Havana before deciding upon this year's destination.

The choice of Halifax for a cruise starting in September may result in the reservists taking along uniform overcoats for the first time in "summer" training. They went to Bath, Me., one summer and "found the nights chilly," but had no heavy clothing in their sea bags.

Many of the men have expressed regret that Havana was eliminated, but disappointment on that score is more than offset by the prospects of riding a battleship's steady deck instead of the rolling frame of a destroyer. They haven't cruised on a battleship since six years ago, when they went to Newport on the Utah.

Tax on Liquor Dealers Vetoed

Mayor of Capitol Heights Disapproves Limit Levy of $100.

An ordinance recently adopted by the town council of Capitol Heights, taxing whisky dealers $100, has been vetoed by Mayor Thomas J. Luckett.

Clarence H. Swick, council president, in disclosing the veto, said he believed the council at its meeting Monday night would attempt to override. This would require a two-thirds vote.

The $100 tax is the maximum under the law. It is believed, according to Mr. Swick, that Mayor Luckett would be willing to pass a smaller tax.

The new motorcycle, ordered by the council to curb speeding on Central avenue, through route from Washington shore resorts, and on Sixty-first street, will be delivered Monday. New ordinances to control its operation will be adopted in the near future.

Every effort will be made by the council to eliminate from the public mind that a "speed trap" will be created, Mr. Swick said. Motorcycle patrolmen will only receive set compensation on convictions.

Clapp, Ex-Aid of Hoover, to Appeal Verdict.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—Katherine Leary Bond, who testified she received birthday congratulations instead of the wedding ring she expected, today was awarded $15,000 in her breach of promise suit against Paul S. Clapp, former aid to Herbert Hoover.

Miss Bond, although she had sued for $500,000, charging the Ohio utilities executive had wooed her ardently over a period of five years, expressed herself as delighted with the verdict.

Clapp, who said he never regarded Miss Bond as more than a friend, had no comment to make on the outcome, but his attorney announced an appeal would be taken.

Of the two principals, only Clapp was in court when the jurors filed in with their verdict after one hour and 50 minutes' deliberation.

Not A Personal Issue.

There is a disposition in Congress as well as among civic groups to examine critically the report of the House sub-committee on crime. That procedure is entirely desirable. Having only limited time and means, the sub-committee was not able to make a completely exhaustive investigation. Some phases of the crime problem, as the Washington Federation of Churches has pointed out, were not adequately considered, and the antagonism which the report has aroused confirms the feeling that in other respects it was somewhat arbitrary, or at least indiscreet.

In a matter of this importance it is well to have more than one group scrutinize the findings and conclusions of the original investigators. The full District Committee especially has a duty to assure itself that the report is sound in detail as well as substance before sending it to the House. Yesterday's proceedings indicate that the committee is determined to check up sharply on its investigators and to revise conclusions that might detract from the underlying objective of the crime inquiry, although it is by no means certain that the modifications so far approved will stand when a final vote of the entire committee is taken.

It is unfortunate, of course, that any controversy over personalities should have arisen from the report. The Federation of Churches is undoubtedly right in saying that we need a tightening up of law enforcement all along the line, rather than denunciation of any single individual. On the other hand, it may be impossible to secure that "tightening up" without injecting new life into the police and the prosecuting machinery at the most strategic points.

The chief objective of the sub-committee is to close the loopholes through which felons escape punishment for their crimes. If it had brought in a general report merely calling for more intense activity on the part of all law-enforcement agencies, its work would probably have come to naught. Consequently, it is unfair to criticize the investigators for endeavoring to be specific. In fact, the precision and straightforward character of the report is one of its chief virtues. If the committee could have achieved that directness and candor with less bludgeoning, however, its work would have been ideal. For the issue is clearly not one of personalities but of protecting the public in the most effective way possible against crime and racketeering.

Financial Orthodoxy Upheld.

In his bonus message President Roosevelt emphatically rejected the theory that an issue of fiat money would speed business recovery. It would, he concedes, temporarily stimulate retail trade, but it "would not improve the conditions necessary to expand those industries in which we have the greatest unemployment," referring, of course, to the heavy industries. The new currency would soon return to the banks, as the President says, and merely swell the ample resources already at their disposal for financing a trade expansion.

While these arguments are familiar, their recital is encouraging evidence that the President has definitely rejected the specious reasoning of those who insist that industrial recovery will be facilitated by Government spending, however financed.

The message also exposed the fallacy of the argument that payment of the bonus in non-interest-bearing certificates would not add to the public debt. A Government, like an individual, must "ultimately meet legitimate obligations out of the production of wealth by the labor of human beings applied to the resources of Nature." If new outlays are covered by fiat money, the apparent ease of the immediate financing leads to recurrent demands for further issues. Thus the final reckoning, as the President warned Congress, is apt to come in the form of an uncontrollable advance of prices, and destruction of savings. The debt is in that case paid in ways unjust, and unpredictable, usually by the people who have least to give.

The President also showed a quickened perception of the importance of preserving the credit of the Government against the assaults of those who demand outlays for purposes not connected with relief and fail to provide taxes to cover the extra costs. In short, there is evidence of a renewed determination to resist the efforts of organized political minorities, however constituted, to raid the Federal Treasury and increase the size of the budgetary deficit.

The emphasis placed upon the necessity of safeguarding the public credit against such assaults, and the rejection of the theory that uncovered Government spending will of itself bring recovery, indicates a return to financial orthodoxy which promises well for the future stability of the dollar.

"What We Want."

These are days in which the American people call for constructive leadership.

Protracted suffering has not yet debauched the common sense which is a national characteristic. But it has made the population keenly receptive to the forceful expression of ideas, whether true or false. And just that public willingness to listen makes it doubly incumbent on those in positions of authority to weigh their words carefully; to see not merely the narrow and selfish objective of their group, but rather the interest of that group in relation to the great whole of American democracy. Without that vision on the part of those who now have responsibility there will be increasing tendency for the masses to follow new leaders—visionary and irresponsible.

The recent veto message of the President was a great contribution precisely because it courageously and brilliantly emphasized public welfare at the expense of the fancied interest of a group. Such a message should be a stimulus for expressions of similar magnitude on the part of leaders in every sphere of national life. Instead it has been promptly followed by two addresses which fail pitiably to show that combination of careful reasoning and accurate perspective so essential at this crucial time.

At separate meetings in New York on Thursday, Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, talked like two feudal barons to whom the well-being of the community is as nothing contrasted with the selfish interest of their respective cohorts. Both men indulged in thinly-veiled threats to fight for what they conceive to be the "rights" of their following, regardless of the action of Congress and the courts. Here is stark revelation of the medieval attitude in Twentieth Century America. Here is the same reliance on brute force which made an English statesman centuries ago refer to the grim alternative of curbing "over-mighty subjects," or having the state succumb in civil strife.

It is of no moment, from the deeper viewpoint, what legislation Mr. Green indorsed, nor what Mr. Grace opposed. What does count is that in both cases an organized minority, representing only a fraction of the population, was told—no matter how suavely, no matter with what conviction behind the argument—that its immediate interests must be considered paramount. A leader of the bonus march of 1932 only voiced the same anarchic principle more crudely when he threatened yesterday that: "We're going to Washington determined to get what we want."

This sort of attitude—this glorification of the limited "we"—has gone too far. When Mr. Green virtually threatens a general strike if the Wagner bill is not enacted, when Mr. Grace virtually predicts refusal to observe the law if it is enacted, the rumbling on the social horizon is all too audible. Whether the threat be from the left or from the right, no democratic government can tolerate coercion of this character. The challenge to Congress to repudiate both extremes, to ram such threats back into the mouths of those who make them, is unmistakable.

"We stand squarely for the open shop," says green Mr. Grace. "We will refuse to work and will . . . fight until we get our rights," says graceless Mr. Green. Is this the quality of America's industrial and trade-union leadership? Is this the guidance which responsible spokesmen offer to lead the country back from the abyss? Is this the fruition of Lincoln's plea "that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth"?

The Court-Martial.

An Army court-martial receives front-page notice primarily because it is so unusual. The general public is to some extent intrigued by the austerity of Army investigation and by the severity of Army discipline, but in the greatest measure interest springs from the infrequency of the procedure.

Accordingly, the attention paid the verdict of guilty handed down in the case of a former assistant quartermaster general, charged with accepting a loan from a concern seeking a War Department contract, is an indirect compliment to the efficency with which Army affairs in general are conducted. The stern sentence of dismissal further demonstrates to the citizenry that graft can not thrive in the ranks of the Nation's military. Only the foolhardy would risk the disgrace and professional ruin invited by such irregular practice.

In view of the damaging connections ramifying from armament manufacturers, as disclosed particularly by the Nye committee, it is reassuring to receive these testimonies to the integrity of the War Department.

Compromise Or Capitulation?

It is reported that House and Senate leaders have reached a tentative agreement, acceptable to President Roosevelt, providing for an extension of the NRA for a period of 21½ months instead of the two years upon which the Administration has heretofore insisted. The deduction of 2½ months appears to be a "face-saving" device to make it easier for the Senate to recede from its support of the Clark resolution, providing for a nine months' prolongation of the recovery act.

If the compromise permits the NRA to retain jurisdiction over businesses "substantially affecting" interstate commerce instead of limiting its activities to strictly intrastate business, it will mean another score for the House measure. While price-fixing is to be barred under the compromise agreement, the significance of this proviso depends upon the character of the accompanying qualifications and reservations.

Pending detailed consideration of the precise phrasing of the agreement, all that can be said is that the outlook for NRA is not as desperate as some of its senatorial die-hard opponents have intimated. It may be that the manifest concern of representatives of organized labor and capital over the prospect of dissolution of the recovery administration has caused some Senators to realize that the friends of the act are more numerous and more far-sighted than its foes.

Outlook For Gold Bloc.

For some time the French franc, supposedly the strongest of the remaining gold currencies, has shown signs of pronounced weakness, and a flight of capital has been in progress which has resulted in a heavy outflow of gold from the country. The immediate cause of anxiety, is the large budgetary deficit, likely to amount to from four to five billion francs by the end of the year, exclusive of extra-budgetary expenditures exceeding 42,000,000,000 francs.

Hoping to restore confidence in the stability of the currency, Premier Flandin is preparing to ask Parliament for virtually dictatorial powers, comparable to those exercised by Poincare in 1926, in order to effect drastic economies in governmental expenditures. Despite this evidence of an intention to avoid inflation and preserve the gold parity of the franc, fears of devaluation persist, in face of great and growing resistance to further deflation of domestic budgetary and other costs.

The future of the Swiss franc is likewise uncertain because of the hardships entailed by the high level of domestic gold prices. In a week a national referendum is to be held to determine whether Switzerland shall embark upon a "New Deal" legislative program, designed to maintain wages and salaries, relieve debtors, promote exports, develop the tourist trade and otherwise arrest the progress of deflation. This proposal has been subjected to critical discussion for nearly a year, and opposition to it is reported to have increased in intensity lately. Certainly an affirmative vote would be equivalent to a repudiation of the policies of the present government, and would doubtless be interpreted as a mandate to devalue the currency.

Even if Switzerland should reject the proposed program, however, she will continue to suffer from the effects of world-wide currency instability, as well as from the uncertainty concerning the ultimate fate of the French franc. Indeed, each defection or threatened defection from the gold bloc weakens the resistant powers of the survivors. Under these circumstances, it is easy to understand why the gold-standard countries are deeply interested in the recent references of Secretary Morgenthau and Chancellor of the Exchequer Chamberlain concerning the outlook for an international stabilization agreement. While neither speaker made any promises, both emphasized the evils of the present system, implying that their respective countries would welcome overtures.

It is of course problematical whether an international stabilization agreement will come in time to save the gold bloc from complete disintegration. Some monetary experts believe that the chances of eventual agreement would actually be improved if France, Holland and Switzerland were to devalue their currencies without further delay. Others maintain that if the United States and Great Britain were to establish a fixed ratio between the dollar and the pound, the gold-bloc countries would be in a position to maintain their currencies at present parities, because of a resultant rise in gold prices. If that were not possible, devaluation might at least be made contingent upon general stabilization of world currencies on a gold basis.

Despite these differences of opinion, it is generally agreed that the present system of fluctuating exchanges and precariously stabilized exchanges is a serious deterrent to international trade and a constant source of domestic economic disturbance.

Dr. Robert Johnston.

The sad word comes from England that the Rev. Robert Johnston, D. D., for many years rector of St. John's Episcopal Church on Lafayette Square, has there succumbed to injuries received in an automobile accident. His death will come as a shock to many Washingtonians, both within his former parish and without.

When Dr. Johnston was compelled to give up his pastorate because of ill health, the community lost a churchman of broad liberality of thought and of deepest spirituality. His was a rare mind, of poetical as much as philosophical bent, which best displayed its powers in the scholarly and original sermons which he delivered to an appreciative congregation. So valued were his interpretations of the Bible and Christianity that they were regularly reprinted in church publications for distribution throughout the world.

Coming from Edinburgh to the United States in 1909, he distributed here the best of his Scottish heritage. A man with a great enthusiasm for the out-of-doors, he concealed an intense appreciation for beauty and a deep sensitivity for mankind beneath a brusqueness that would at first deceive those lacking in perception. Yet all who were privileged to any close association knew him for the tender and polished gentleman he was. His type can not pass without a mournful sense of loss.

District Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last night, May 19, I listened with interest to your news broadcast, particularly to that part that dealt with traffic safety by Inspector Lamb. How about a little more sanity in the matter of traffic control?

I have driven a car in every large city in the United States and I feel that I can say without fear of successful contradiction that in no large city is traffic handled as poorly as it is in Washington, D. C. Why are the lights timed for a speed of 22 miles per hour? I have been around Washington a lot and I have seen traffic on F or G streets pile up two blocks deep waiting for a light to turn green. No wonder everyone drives like mad for a green light when he realizes he is probably going to have to pitch camp while waiting for a light to turn green.

Take for example, Maryland avenue from the Capitol out to Bladensburg road. More lights than a Christmas tree! You creep along almost in second gear to keep from stopping at every intersection. If lights are necessary there, why not turn the whole street green at one instant so that traffic can move? Do that and obviate the necessity for all the cutting in and out and racing to try to beat the light.

Another item: Last Wednesday afternoon, May 15, at the intersection of F and Ninth streets, I saw there was no traffic cop and no lights. Why not? Why all the lights between Pennsylvania avenue and the Bureau of Engraving, on Fourteenth street? It doesn't make sense. No lights at Seventh or Eighth on H street northwest. If traffic can get along without direction at those intersections it can certainly get along without it at the above-mentioned section on Fourteenth street. Somebody must have sold the city a bunch of traffic lights and they put them up for scenic effect. Did anyone ever take the time to count the cars at various intersections and regulate the time interval accordingly?

Get some sensible system of traffic control and enforce the law.

Calamity Averted.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Speaking of chain letters, here are a few interesting features. I do not know just when the present 10-cent fad started, so we will assume that it was about March 1. Then, if everyone who received a letter had sufficient enthusiasm to send his or her five copies within three days, and so the chains had all been kept unbroken, we would by May 14 have reached the twenty-fifth issue.

The figures presented in the letters only tell us that if the chain were unbroken each recipient would receive 15,625 dimes. That would be on the sixth issue. But the number of letters up to the twenty-fifth would continue to increase. By the time the sixteenth issue is reached there will have been sent 152,000,000,000 and over. These letters, if placed in a pack, as envelopes in a box, about 50 to the inch, would reach almost twice around the earth, circumference 25,000 miles.

As the distance from the earth to the moon is about ten times the circumference of the earth, the seventeenth issue would reach to the moon.

The twenty-fourth issue is something over 275 quadrillion, and if placed flat, would cover the surface of the earth, land and sea, if they would float.

The twenty-fifth issue would reach a quintillion 375 quadrillion, with enough insignificant trillions, billions, and millions left over to run up to the moon and back a time or two, besides taking several spins around the earth, treading on the letters that issue 24 had already spread on it.

So it is quite evident that several of the chains must have been broken before now. Those of us who broke them have helped to avert a calamity that would have been worse than a combination dust storm and flood.

Being among the number of calamity averters, I subscribe myself,

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

Pig Feast.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some more massacre of little pigs and perhaps big pigs occurred this week, for, according to a United Press dispatch from Knoxville, Tenn., the "TVA Appreciation Week" was to be climaxed on Friday with a "public barbecue," at which thousands will play hosts to TVA's 2,500 executives and official staff personnel.

It should take an immense amount of pig meat for such a great feast for these 2,500 tax-eaters of the TVA. The taxpayers of the country, those who are financially bled and barbecued to pay the gigantic cost of the TVA, were not included in the invitation to partake of the feast. Neither were some 10,000,000 investors in public utilities whose values have shrunk billions in consequence of the TVA offensive against them. The coal miners of the Tennessee Valley region whose jobs are threatened by the TVA, and who were told by Mr. Lilienthal that their industry is only a "dying one anyway," did not appear among the invitees.

Pig meat is quite a luxury nowadays. It used to be a main food for poor people, though most everyone likes it. But now it is far too expensive for most of us for everyday use. Thanks to the AAA, it becomes a food reserved for the privileged classes, such as those 2,500 executives and official staff personnel of the TVA, who have squandered such vast amounts of Government money at and around Knoxville, that obviously the mere suggestion of pork in appreciation of pork was enough to inspire this great barbecue feast.

Relief And Domestic Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On May 8 in the editorial, "Local Relief," you made the following statement: "Reports that some individuals, especially domestic servants, are leaving their jobs to go on relief rolls have long been current in Washington." It may be that a few domestic servants have left their jobs and thereafter applied for relief, but I challenge you to produce proof that, within the last 12 months, as many as 50 such servants who were receiving as much as $7 per week in wages and were working under decent working conditions, not to exceed 12 hours per day, have, without justifiable cause or excuse, quit their jobs for the purpose of going on the relief rolls.

There are at least 3,500 domestics on the relief rolls. Practically all of them are colored women. Should all of them be indiscriminately dropped from the relief rolls in order to find or punish less than 50 "chiselers?"

The present manager of the District Employment Center is anxious to make a record in the number of placements. Because of the widespread publicity given to the number of domestics on the relief rolls, thousands of persons who never before had servants and who are not now able to employ them, are endeavoring to take advantage of the plight of these unfortunate persons to force them to work long hours at hard labor for a bare existence. Perhaps the manager of the employment center sees in this increased demand an opportunity for an unprecedented increase in his placements. If the Public Assistance Division forces these domestics to take any work offered them through the employment center, it will be placing these 3,500 colored women at the mercy of all who wish their domestic work done for nothing.

The writer has discussed this problem with Mr. David Ruml, while he was manager of the employment center, and with Mr. Elwood Street, Miss M. Alice Hill and the present manager of the employment center. Both Mr. Ruml and Mr. Street agreed that domestics should be paid a fair minimum wage, their working hours should be reasonable and their working conditions decent. Miss Hill thinks the problem too difficult to attack. The present manager of the employment center apparently does not think that his office should concern itself with wages, hours of work and working conditions of domestics.

Do you not think that, before your paper criticizes Commissioner Allen for not establishing closer relations with the employment center so as to force able-bodied domestics to work at the peril of being denied relief, it should first suggest to the employment center and the public assistance division a policy which will assure these relief clients a living wage, reasonable hours of work and fair working conditions?

WHO is Audrey Wurdemann?

* * *

We don't mean the author of "Bright Ambush," which was awarded the Pulitzer Poetry Prize a week or two ago.

She is the wife of Joseph Auslander, that Pennsylvania poet, who lectures on poetry at Columbia University. And she is (isn't she?) a granddaughter of Washington—the City of Washington—being the daughter of a distinguished Washingtonian and graduate of George Washington University: Dr. Henry Vanderbilt Wurdemann, now of Seattle, one of the best known ophthalmic surgeons on the Pacific Coast.

* * *

No, we don't mean the poet that wrote "Bright Ambush"—at least, we're not sure we mean her.

* * *

We mean the poet that wrote "The House of Silk."

We're quite sure we mean her, anyhow.

* * *

However, we had better give it to you as it comes to us.

* * *

It comes to us in a letter suspiciously beginning: "If by any chance you should refer to this letter in your Column, I should very much appreciate your omitting my name."

Nevertheless, this modest Pulitzer Prize detective, does sign his name—and his address—in confidence, of course, "as an evidence of good faith."

* * *

And he irresistibly proceeds:

"I'm puzzled about something an need somebody to turn to. Mind I I turn to you?

"There—I felt quite sure you wouldn't!"

* * *

He means this for flattery. Flattery, we have generally found, is a Trap.

But what follows is intriguing for its own sake, whether there is a trap in it or not.

* * *

"My puzzle," writes this correspondent, "has to do with the recent Pulitzer awards.

"You will recall that, when the announcement was made of the poetry award to Audrey Wurdemann the reports stated that she was quite young—24 or 25—and that 'Bright Ambush' (her prize-winning volume) was her first book of poetry. It was further stated that this was the first time the Pulitzer Prize had even been awarded to a first book of poetry.

* * *

"That interested me. So I looked up 'Bright Ambush' in the Library of Congress.

* * *

"For some strange reason—there's a whole story in that, too, but 'another story'—I found 'Bright Ambush' on the shelves. I'll bet you can't find 'Now in November,' on those shelves for at least a year to come. But poetry doesn't, apparently, share the popularity of fiction.

* * *

"Feverishly, I opened 'Brigh' Ambush.' There, in its own introductory notice of the author, was the declaration:

"'Bright Ambush' is her first book'—meaning, of course, her first book of verse.

* * *

"And then? Then came a startling discovery. On that same shelf, right next to 'Bright Ambush,' stood a little black volume called 'The House of Silk,' written, according to its title page, by—one Audrey Wurdemann!

* * *

No, my eyes did not deceive me. "You can see it for yourself, if you'll go down there to the Congressional Library. It was published by Harold Vinal in 1927.

* * *

"Coincidence? There are two Audrey Wurdemanns?

"If this is a case of coincidence, it is a case of coincidence astoundingly elaborated.

* * *

"For it doesn't cease and terminate with the somewhat unusual name of the author—or, if such be the case, authors.

"At the time of the Pulitzer Award, it was also mentioned that Miss Wurdemann—or should I say Mrs. Auslander?—had been a poetical protege of George Sterling. That unexplaining explanatory note in the front of 'Bright Ambush' also says so.

"Yet 'The House of Silk' has a foreword by George Sterling!

* * *

"You see my puzzle. Does anybody, however, see the answer to it? I don't!

"If 'The House of Silk' is not the work of another Audrey Wurdemann, but of the author of 'Bright Ambush,' then why is 'Bright Ambush' called, by the Pulitzer judges, Audrey Wurdemann's first book of verse? And why should it be so specifically called in its own introductory pages?

* * *

"Can you shed some of that mellow light of yours on this mystery? . . ."

* * *

The Post-Impressionist believes he could throw the light—and there is little he likes better than light-throwing.

But in the present case he would much prefer to have his readers use their own lamps.

Willie's Threat.

THE trouble about a fellow like Father Coughlin is the bad example he sets for others. Learning early in life that he had a melodious voice he used to talk a lot because he liked to listen to himself. Then he found the voice appealed to others. One step leads to another and now that he realizes its full mesmerizing effects he is getting bolder and bolder. He gets himself referred to as an outstanding political force and written up as an American Messiah. It is the same voice that will hook him in the end but in the meantime he sees no limit as to how far he can go. He is the great boom of 1935.

But look how he influences others. Take Willie Green, our head of the American Federation of Labor, for instance. It is very apparent that Willie who is also a leader of men, has been studying the father.

• • • •

He has either been studying the father or reading one of those books on "How to Exert Strong Leadership; Do you want to command attention among men, do you want them to listen when you speak, get this book then for $3.50."

It's a cinch Willie would be interested in anything concerning strong leadership. Because his has been mostly weak. There are so many more aggresive forces in the labor organization that the story is that Willie has to keep on his toes to keep his leadership job.

He's been perking up considerably of late. He started off on his perking up rather smoothly and worked up to the high pitch, indicating he has either learned a lot from the father or that he has come to the last chapter in his book. At first, Willie confined his pronouncements to "greatly fearings." This is to say Willie was always greatly fearing there would be a strike here or a strike there. Only a few days ago he was greatly fearing the wage scale set for the works program was so low there would be social unrest.

He greatly feared some of the workers on the projects might strike. If the unemployed were to refuse to accept the relief set up for them at great cost it would cause a panic among the taxpayers, of course.

• • • •

But he stepped up the ladder to the threatening stage in New York Thursday night. He threatened a general strike if labor doesn't get its demands. The impression is that the picture of Father Coughlin, who had gone on an oratorical spree the night before was constantly before him. As Willie sat in his hotel before the labor meeting he was to address, sat there contemplating men and things, he must have thought this was a good time to try his leadership lessons out. If persons who buy books on leadership don't carry the lessons of the book out then it has served no purpose at all.

Anyone who knows Willie can visualize him back at the hotel after the meeting removing his coat and saying "whew" over his threat. He must have turned it over and over in his mouth within the confines of his room and experienced alternating emotions of fright and of delight as he recalled the plaudits of the crowd.

• • • •

He experienced fright all right, because if there is one thing Willie doesn't want it is a general strike. He remembers well how the general strike in San Francisco broke down last summer and how all other general strikes have done likewise. Willie hasn't imbibed enough of the Coughlin confidence to think he could make one a success. It would be a job entirely too big for him. When it ended Willie might be in the ranks and some of those fellows who are always after his job might be on top.

Willie was back in town yesterday, up at the White House to see Mr. Roosevelt. Afterwards he was right satisfied with himself. Whether he was tickled for having brought himself to bold utterances like other leaders or because Mr. Roosevelt promised him something is not known. Some of the newspaper fellows thought Mr. Roosevelt had told him he was for the Wagner labor disputes bill and that this was what made him tickled. But it had been generally understood Mr. Roosevelt was for this bill anyway.

Maybe, if Mr. Roosevelt gave his support again Willie thought it was his bold speech that brought the results.

This would be most unfortunate because Willie would be encouraged to make more bold speeches and he really doesn't look good making them. They and Willie just don't seem to fit.

Fair In Philadelphia

Quaker City Rebuffs Derisive Critics By Staging Exposition Faintly Reminiscent Of Sesquicentennial And Century Of Progress As Mayor Huzzas.

By Eugene Pharo.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia.

AS of May 18 all critics of Philadelphia are to be considered silenced. Reference, from any direction, to her alleged shortcomings is now unthinkable. This result has been accomplished by means of a faint echo of the Sesquicentennial Fair of 1926, and possibly of the Chicago Century of Progress, that was held in the city from May 8 to 18, without any too much fuss being made about it in the outside world. It was entitled "Philadelphia on Parade" and was intended to be such an overpowering manifestation of the city's cultural and industrial empire as to have had the above mentioned effect.

Mayor Hampton L. Moore expressed the potency of the affair, which was held in the municipal Convention Hall, at a luncheon meeting at which the enterprise was launched, under the ministration of the Hotelmen's Association, city departments, industrial and business associations, railroads, fraternal orders, some educational institutions and commercial exhibitors.

"It is time to stop deriding Philadelphia and realize that it provides for all human needs," the mayor declared, flushed with the afflatus given by a pageant of school children, who, from the depths of their experience, had rehearsed various episodes demonstrating the superexcellence of their city, its traffic regulations, its educational and religious advantages, its contributions to the arts and sciences and its gestures toward material improvements.

"Philadelphia has the goods," elegantly continued His Honor, "and 'Philadelphia on Parade' will silence those who would disparage our city.

"We heard a lot about the litter on our streets," he said, with a mightily aggrieved expression, "the inadequacy of our ash collection system and other similar criticisms which we are doing our utmost to correct, but what are these compared to the magnificence of Philadelphia as a whole, its miles of paved streets, its parks and its thousands of homes, as well as its world reputation as a leader in medicine, law, the sciences and industry in general?"

• • • •

THERE being no audible answer to these purely rhetorical questions, in which the executive accidently or on purpose omitted to include any direct reference to the city's politics, the mayor continued: "The purpose of the exposition is to divert the mind from unpleasant matters which are forced upon us from some quarters and make us realize how fortunate we are to live in the best city in the United States.

"This city is not only a safe harbor for the largest ships," said the speaker, to a generous chorus of his own huzzas, "but also a safe harbor for the citizen and his family."

The last reference may be a little obscure. It may more easily be understood if it is recalled that when the Russian Ambassador, Mr. Troyanovsky, not long since visited Philadelphia the mayor refused to endanger the city's security by taking official notice of the occasion: that when some of the city's radicals in December wanted to conduct memorial services for Lenin, use of the Convention Hall was energetically withheld from them; and that when a couple of high school students tried to distribute peace pamphlets in connection with an antiwar demonstration in April, they were immediately arrested and locked up. Similar occurrences, making plain to everyone the zeal with which the citizen of Philadelphia is protected from assault by alien ideas, have become a commonplace during the present city administration.

The miniature fair that Mayor Moore sought to introduce, and for whose high and noble purpose he gave attestation, started off with a bang chiefly because former United States Senator George Wharton Pepper had shaved off his moustache, and went on public view, together with other grave and dignified members of the bar, acting the role of George Washington in a reconstruction of the Constitutional Convention, without some reference to which ancient event no Philadelphia celebration can be quite complete.

FROM that point there was a lull in the attendance and receipts, until well along in the second and final week. Then there resulted such a crush as to rob the show of any joy that might be had by a fellow and his girl who decided to take in the sight. This on the evidence of a young office manager who tried it on.

The events that were held included several showings of a feature pageant, "Philadelphia Marches On," that was devoted to illustrating the business and industrial business of the town. Another was called "Philadelphia, the Dynamo of World Industry." Sunday, May 12, was devoted to "Faith Through the Ages," with some passing references to Mother. Several afternoons were given over to a "Court of Fashions."

The Mummers got out the regalia that usually sees the light only on New Year's Day, and paraded at the Convention Hall, and various patriotic organizations appeared in a crowd, to go through a ceremony called "Massing the Colors." An historical pageant arranged by the alumni of the Germantown Academy ranked almost with the pageant of "Making the Constitution" that was put on by the bar association.

In the exhibits were represented a modern home, indorsed by the Federal Housing Administration, which attracted as much interest as the modern homes shown at the Chicago fair and which was one of the few things that succeeded in any measure in rivaling the interest caused by that other and somewhat larger celebration. The Franklin Institute had some scientific exhibits and there were medical charts and exhibits almost like those in the Hall of Science at Chicago.

The Welfare Federation cooperated, in order to obtain some well-earned publicity for its philanthropic activities and the merchants of Chestnut street produced a replica of their street and its shops, being a very definite echo of a similar street scene from Colonial times that was shown at the sesquicentennial. Why it should have been erected, to show Philadelphians how a street many of them visit every day actually looks, was a mystery to more than one visitor to the hall.

• • • •

AVIATION came in for a big play. Assembly of automobiles was in progress, as well as other industrial scenes and exhibits that were fairly numerous, but not too numerous for the underwriters of the show. In fact, they were hardly numerous enough.

There were, among attractions sponsored by business concerns who had hired space to show their wares, a number of municipal displays that were installed partly to fill up space that could not be sold, and partly no doubt to fulfill some of the purpose phrased by Mayor Moore.

The management of the fair, when it was all over and no more patriotic ballyhoo was absolutely required, was frank to admit that if had hoped, besides stimulating business, to have made some money that could be turned over to the city's convention bureau, to use in attracting big meetings of spenders to the town, perhaps including the Democratic National Convention.

Just how much, if any, such funds resulted was a matter about which nearly everyone was smilingly vague after the adding machines had done their work.

The only definite statement as to the success of the city's latest venture into the business of holding fairs was that obtained by your reporter on the Monday after it was over, from Edgar S. McKaig, general chairman.

He said the Philadelphia Gas Company was pleased with the orders and prospect lists it had obtained at its exhibit, and that some companies that had refused to buy space were sorry now.

He didn't say anything about the fair's efficacy in silencing criticism of Mayor Moore's success as an ash collector.

Self-Control In Singing

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

I HAVE myself always wondered how it was possible for great artists to sing passages of intense passion without being overcome by their feelings. To be too much affected would be absolutely ruinous to the execution. There are many passages in literature I can not read aloud without breaking down; and I am often so deeply affected by hearing vocal music that I wonder how it is possible for the singers to preserve absolute self-control.

Dr. Johnson was often gruff and harsh in manner, but it is a matter of record that he could not read a certain part of the Latin hymn, "Dies Irae," without crying.

• • • •

It may be that actors and singers are able to throw themselves out of the part entirely and for the time being change their personality. Coquelin said the actor must never feel the part himself, but simply (with intellectual control perfect) interpret it. Others have a different opinion:

The problem is for the actor or singer to reduce the audience to tears, while retaining self-control.

I asked Emma Eames, the great singer, about this, and she writes me:

"Internally an art has to be conceived at high passion but has to be raised to a higher plane before it can be transmitted in the form which will convince and carry the public. As long as one is in the throes of the passion, the expression is blurred—as you well know."

Paris At Random

By

Andre Vulliet

Special Correspondence of The Post.

YOU don't know how lovely Paris is at twilight around this time of the year! Being much higher north than Washington and even Maine, the French capital enjoys much longer summer evenings, with slow night falls and delicate hues.

At this particular hour, when the day is gone and the night is not yet there, nothing could be more beautiful than an old or grandiose monument silhouetted by floods of light against a sky that is no longer blue, although it is not yet dark.

Such was Notre Dame the other evening when both the last sun rays and hidden searchlights poured additional beauty on its eight-century-old towers, its smiling saints, its horrible gargoyles. Engineers were devising a new breath-taking effect for the old cathedral as Paris intends to do itself proud during the coming "season" at the end of this month and all through June.

All those who were here a few years ago remember how gorgeous the Place de la Concorde was when it appeared entirely lit up for the first time. The effect was so thrilling that it was immediately copied in nearly every capital, but it was so expensive that Paris had to cut it down to one day a week.

As an additional allurement to foreigners, new items are to be added to Paris' flood-lighting account. They are now making tests on the Institute, the turreted Conciergerie, the small triumphal arch in the Tuileries gardens, the Sacre Coeur, the Pantheon and many other places meant to give each section of Paris a festive aspect.

• • • •

AS a matter of fact, the usual spring refurbishing is going on everywhere in the French capital. But nowhere is it more evident than in its parks and public gardens.

Large contingents of gardeners have invaded the Champs Elysees, the Tuileries, the Champ de Mars and are arranging beds with carloads of lovely flowers carefully preserved or grown during the winter in the city's hot houses. As usual, a trainful of tulips, offered annually by the Dutch government to the City of Paris, has been laid out in clever and colored arabesques throughout the Tuileries gardens.

It is a curious thing, that fondness for gardening which seems to be deeply rooted in nearly every Frenchman. You should see the constant care and the devoted expertness with which many a Communistic worker or a respectable employe looks after "his" tiny bit of a garden somewhere in a Paris suburb!

Passing through the Champ de Mars the other day I saw a group of dirty-capped, drooping-moustached, blue-aproned typical French gardeners, who were doing over a lawn. They had turned the old one upside down and, to obtain a good level, they were stamping it down, under the sun, with their heavy wooden shoes. Back benders at work! And right in the center of Paris!

STRANGE as it seems, there may be an ethics of cafe life, the by-laws of which are not well defined.

A nice and well-dressed woman the other day, feeling the strain of a nasty headache, entered into a renown cafe on the boulevards to order a drink and an aspirin. To be more comfortable, she took off her hat. Up came the manager, saying politely:

"Madame, I am sorry we can not serve you. I must point out that you are alone and, what is more, that you have removed your hat." Out stepped the infuriated lady who immediately instructed her lawyer to sue the cafe management for damages. When the case comes up, it will be interesting to hear the court's opinion on the matter of cafe life ethics.

LONG regarded as rigid stay-at homes, the French now seem to be possessed by an incurable wanderlust at least on Sundays.

Camping and canoeing are becoming exceedingly popular with the younger set. For the first time, the nautical salon was held a few days ago instead of in the fall as boat builders and tent and camping outfit manufacturers thought that this season was the most likely to tempt many into expeditions and explorations along the rivers and canals of France.

And right they were as the display of Indian canoes, with or without sails, of sail boats, outboards, racers, fishing boats together with tents, floating knives and what have you attracted a considerable number of young visitors.

ROUGHING it through France in a freight car is the latest innovation offered by the French State Railways in the field of camping.

Camping around a fire is certainly great, but if you can't move on like regular gypsies, you miss all the fun of it. And if you have no car—there are many such people in France—it's hard to walk along the roads with all your paraphernalia.

Quite a number of box cars, resembling the famous "40 hommes, 8 chevaux" of the A. E. F., have been transformed into movable camps accommodating 10 travelers. Each car is equipped with a kitchenette, a toilet, and space for camp beds.

Like railroad gypsies, camping parties can start out whenever they so desire and stop wherever they wish for any length of time. They can sleep in "their" van or camp out in the open until they are fed up with Normandy and want to see Brittany for a change. And all this for a cost of a little over $1 a day for the box car and half the third-class railroad fare for each traveler.

Women Would Sell Eternity At $10, Columbia Savant Says

Men's Price $1,000, He Finds in Test to Determine Human Values.

By the United Press.

New York.—Dr. Edward Thorndike, professor of education at Columbia University, believes he has found out just what a woman would do for a million dollars—and just what she wouldn't do. And you'd be surprised.

The professors also included men in the tests by which he arrived at his conclusions. In general he found that women were gentler but more inclined to be adventurous and curious.

Dr. Thorndike asked his subjects, of whom 40 were less than 30 years old and 24 were older than 40, a series of questions to find out how much money they would accept to degrade themselves and how much money they would be willing to pay to obtain certain privileges such, for example, as an hour's talk with Benito Mussolini.

The average woman, he found from their answers, would surrender all hope of a happy hereafter for the modest sum of $10 while the men would require $1,000 before they would give up hope.

Of human practices, he found, the thought of human cannibalism was the most repugnant. The average man wouldn't take less than $360,000,000 while the woman, on the average, would take $1,378,000. It was pre-supposed that the act would be blazoned in the daily newspapers.

Regarding public intoxication, the men were much more agreeable than the women. For $25, they would publicly befuddle themselves. The women wanted $98.

The older group was more conservative in the matter of insulting the Nation's heroes. Half of the younger persons said they would spit on a picture of the Father of His Country for $10. More than two-thirds of the older ones "wouldn't do it for less than $10,000."

In the matter of choking a stray cat or sticking a pig, the men were more reasonable. They wanted an average of $2,500 for the deed. Their sisters held out for $108,000.

Dr. Thorndike asked the subjects how much money they would take to live their entire lifetime in a New York apartment. They could entertain guests, but they could never leave the house. For this imprisonment, however pleasant, the women wanted $82,500,000 while the men would stay home for $10,000,000.

Roosevelt Above Garbo.

The older men would be willing to spend one-fifth of a day in jail for the privilege of seeing a man hanged. The others, men and women wouldn't give up even an hour for the same purpose. For the happiness of talking to Mussolini, the older women would gladly spend 8.2 days in jail. But then, they'd do the same thing for the privilege of riding on a camel.

The younger men were more interested than other groups in the possibility of talking to President Roosevelt. They said they'd spend 4.2 days in jail for the privilege. And yet they would only stay seven-tenths of a day in jail for the ineffable joy of having an hour's chat with Greta Garbo. Neither the young men nor the older women were at all interested in Garbo.

With their adventurous nature, the younger women were willing to be imprisoned for 2.3 days if afterward they might be taken 15,000 feet in the air in a balloon.

Woman Orchestra Makes Radio Hit

Spitalny Proves Contention That They Equal Men.

The ladies win—in the musical field, according to Phil Spitalny, and he ought to know, what with working with 33 of them on C. B. S.'s "Hour of Charm" broadcasts. Here's a man's viewpoint:

"Women are good musicians because they are extremists," he says. "They love harder, they hate harder and they work harder. Besides, women take much more pride in their work."

Spitalny conceived the idea of a large all-girl unit a few years ago, but his friends scoffed at it. "There will be petty jealousies, you can't rely on them, they won't show up for rehearsals and most of them will go off and get married just as you have the orchestra set," his friends told him. But the maestro was convinced that girl musicians are as capable as men.

These young women heard each Tuesday, WJSV, at 8 p. m., are the cream of the musical crop. The entire string section of Spitalny's orchestra was recruited from the outstanding pupils of the Juilliard School. The concertmeistress, Evelyn Kay, has been a scholarship pupil for years, has won several music awards and appeared on the concert stage and as featured performer in such theatrical productions as "Music in May," "Nina Rosa" and "East Wind."

Men, being men, can not tell you very much about women. For instance, to the young-man-in-love the opposite sex is all sweetness and light; the bachelor, who has dodged the ladies for years, believes them to be scheming minxes, and the married man is probably afraid to tell you what he really thinks.

Therefore, to get a true opinion of women, you must go to a woman for your information . . . and so we've gone to Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of The Washington Post's woman's pages, to find out about those lovely and sometimes sweet creatures who do so much to make our lives happy and miserable. And Miss Lindsay certainly tells us, and all other readers of The Post, about "The Gentle Sex." You'll find her impressions of her sisters . . . and brothers, too . . . in The Post each Sunday morning to entertain . . . and educate you. Each week she writes this amusing, intelligent column which so satirically punctures so many of our illusions, and which gives us an insight into the devious ways of women.

For example, she outlines the character of Tactful Tillie, who never comes right out and tells her friends they are getting fat. Oh, no! Tactful Tillie merely sniffs, "Are'nt you getting a bit stout, dearie?" Tactful Tillie, Miss Lindsay also reveals, prides herself on being able to find out disagreeable things by a method which is practically painless . . . to her.

Or Miss Lindsay describes the conversation at the Sunday dinner table; and her description is as true to life as the family laundry line. You can recognize Uncle Henry, who wants to talk politics, and Aunt Susan, who simply must tell Cousin Mary about those perfectly darling little needlepoint footstools she saw downtown for only $2.98, or, if you read carefully, you might recognize yourself!

We are sure that Miss Lindsay's sardonic humor will please you as much as it pleases us . . . we think it's one of the best features in The Sunday Post. Gently, oh, so very gently, the barb of her wit penetrates . . . but you're laughing so much you don't mind the sting.

"The Gentle Sex," which has become one of the best-liked columns in The Sunday Post, may be found each Sunday morning on the woman's pages of

Old Christ Church Will Recall Humble Beginning Tomorrow

Post Staff Photo.

Nothing in Christ Church, which tomorrow observes its 141st birthday anniversary, is more treasured by members of its congregation than these pieces of hand-hammered Communion silver, displayed here by the Rev. Edward Gabler, rector. The service, consisting of two chalices and two patens, was given the church as a memorial gift in 1802. The set is now used at Christmas and on other church holidays.

Congregation Established in 1795 by Small Band of Episcopalians.

One hundred and forty-one years ago today—the Constitution of the United States was then but 5 years old—a small band of Washington Episcopalians were made happy by some news. This news announced the Maryland Assembly of the Episcopal Church had given its permission for a parish in the city.

Previously the parishioners had done their worshiping in Georgetown or other nearby parishes.

These jubilant parishioners acted on their news, and a year later—on May 25, 1795—met in a building, crude in its simplicity, on New Jersey avenue near D street southeast. Under the guidance of the Rev. George Ralph they tended to the business of organizing their numbers into a formal parish. They elected vestrymen and decided on the name of Christ Church.

Tomorrow Christ Church will recall its humble beginning, when the Rev. Edward Gabler, present rector, leads services commemorating the historically significant past of the church. At 11 a. m. services parishioners will meet to pay homage to those forbears who consecrated their worship ground on the first meeting day.

Christ Church's present building at 620 G street, while several years younger than the parish, is more than a century and a quarter old. It was built in 1807, the first services being conducted there August 9 of that year. The Right Rev. Thomas John Claggett, Episcopal bishop for the Maryland Diocese, consecrated the building.

The congregation has grown since then. The church building had to expand, too, and take on improvements to keep pace, although it stands today fundamentally as it did then.

In 1812 the Congressional Cemetery was deeded to the church and became known as the Washington Parish Burial Ground. In 1893 a Mission Chapel was founded and named St. Matthew's.

During the World War many activities for soldiers were carried on in the church under the direction of the rector, the Rev. David R. Covell. Later two memorial windows were built in and dedicated, one for the men who served in the war and the other in memory of the Rev. Charles D. Andrews, one of the popular rectors of the parish.

In 1921 the choir was moved from the rear of the church to the chancel, which was enlarged and remodeled. The Rev. William Curtis White was rector at the time.

During the rectorship of the Rev. Calvert E. Buck a magnificent stained glass chancel window was dedicated in memory of mothers. Since then a parish house has been added and a new rectory built. The congregation is working now to obtain a new organ.

The Rev. Mr. Gabler has manifested an interest in young people's work through the organization of a large junior church school, from which a junior vested choir of 40 voices has been drawn.

Former rectors of Christ Church have been invited to tomorrow's services. Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7:30 a. m.; junior church school at 9:30 a. m.; the special anniversary service at 11 a. m.; Young Peoples Fellowship at 6:45 p. m. and evening prayer and address at 8 o'clock.

Religious Drama Will Be Presented

A religious drama, "The Rich Young Man," by Sara Kingsbury, will be presented by the Sunday Evening Club at 8 p. m. tomorrow in Chevy Chase Baptist Church.

In the drama, which is under the direction of Mrs. Wallace Muir, are Mrs. Ruth P. Forbes, Cordelia Griffin, Mary Pearce, Ella Fraser, Elizabeth Mooney, Winston Marshall, Kenneth B. Forbes, J. F. Gulick, David C. Mearns, Donald Fraser, Winston Mooney, Earl Warnock, Irving Hobson, S. J. Poole and Arthur A. Smith.

At 11 a. m. services in the church the Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor, will preach on "All Things Common."

Southeastern U. Class to Attend Lutheran Rites

Group's Baccalaureate Will Be at Church of the Reformation.

The graduating class of Southeastern University of the Washington Y. M. C. A., will attend the 11 a. m. service at Lutheran Church of the Reformation tomorrow for its baccalaureate service. The Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, D. D., will deliver the sermon, speaking on "Life at Its Best."

At the evening service Dr. Blackwelder will conclude his present series of evening sermons on "Contribution of Religion to Health," using as his theme, "Can Faith Healing Be Proved." Dr. L. M. Zimmerman, retired Lutheran minister, will preach to the young people at 6:45 p. m. on "How Shall We Think of the Future Life?"

St. Mark's Lutheran Church, Eighth street and Independence avenue southwest. "The Bright Side of Failure" will be the pastor's theme at 11 a. m. services. The Luther League will join with the District League in an open-air service at 6 p. m. at East Riverdale.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut avenue and Everett street. The Rev. Henry W. Snyder, D. D., pastor. "Prayers God Hears" is the subject of Dr. Snyder's Memorial Day sermon to be delivered at 11 a. m. tomorrow. At 8 p. m. he will speak on the subject, "Taking the Bit in the Teeth."

St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, Kentucky avenue at Fifteenth street southeast. The Rev. E. H. Meuser, pastor. The pastor will preach on "The Ascension of Our Lord" at 11 a. m. and on "A Man of God" at 8 p. m. services.

Grace Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Varnum streets northwest. The Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor. Basing his sermon on the gospel lesson for the fifth Sunday after Easter, the pastor will preach tomorrow morning on "Finding a Place for Prayer." The sermon is one of a series leading to the festival of Pentecost in June.

Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle. The Rev. Carl C. Rasmussen, D. D., pastor. The pastor's morning theme is "How the Church Was Once Saved." Robert Allan will lead the Christian Endeavor Society meeting at 6:45 p. m. The subject will be "What Shall We Do About Social Injustices?"

Christ Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Gallatin streets. The Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel, pastor. At the 11 a. m. service the church's annual Memorial Day service will be conducted. The pastor will preach on "Being Dead, He Yet Speaketh."

Georgetown Lutheran Church. The Rev. Harold E. Beatty, pastor. The pastor will preach on "The Inner World" at his 11 a. m. service. Mrs. Helen Albert will have charge of the Young People's meeting at 7 p. m.

Christ Lutheran Church, Bethesda, Md. The Rev. Henry J. Whiting, pastor. While Mr. Whiting is preaching the baccalaureate sermon tomorrow morning at the University of Maryland, his pulpit will be occupied by the Rev. George Drach.

Episcopalians Tomorrow Ask Crop Blessing

Observance of Rogation Sunday Planned in D. C. Churches.

Observance of Rogation Sunday, which originated in middle Europe during the fifth century, will take place tomorrow in all of Washington's Episcopal churches.

Although services may not be given over entirely to the observance, attention of parishioners will be drawn in some way to the day which medieval worshipers set aside for invoking Divine blessing on crops.

The days of Rogation, which also include Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, are said to have begun when Mamercus, Bishop of Vienna, ordered days of prayer in order to avert a famine which threatened his diocese. In accordance with custom, the Litany will be recited in tomorrow's service processions in the Episcopal Church.

'Soul and Body' Subject Of Christian Scientists

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden text is from Psalms 84:2: "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God."

Among the citations which compromise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee" (Psalms 73:25). The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The science of being shows it to be impossible for infinite Spirit or Soul to be in a finite body or for men to have an intelligence separate from his Maker." (page 309).

9,000 Expected At Flag Service On Mt. St. Alban

100 Patriot Organizations to Participate; Sermon by Freeman.

A congregation of more than 9,000 is expected for Washington Cathedral's ceremonial Massing of the Colors at 4 p. m. tomorrow in the amphitheater on Mount St. Alban. Arrangements have been made not only for one of the largest assemblies in the eight-year history of the ceremony, but also for one of the most colorful processions.

The more than 100 patriotic organizations participating will furnish 700 flag-bearers and escorts for the procession, which will move from the Cathedral Grounds flagpole to the amphitheater.

After the procession arrives the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will deliver the sermon and Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, commandant of the United States Marine Corps, will make an address.

For half an hour before the beginning of the ceremony a program of sacred music will be played by the United States Marine Band, directed by Capt. Taylor Branson.

Representatives of the Military Order of the World War, which has arranged the ceremony, will include Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, commander of the local chapter; Col. Alva J. Brasted, chief of chaplains, United States Army, who will read the lesson; Capt. Arlington A. McCallum, chaplain general, and Capt. Oliver James Hart, chaplain of the local chapter. Canon Raymond L. Wolven, chaplain to the Bishop of Washington, will act as master of ceremonies and the cathedral clergy and choir will march in procession.

Electrical amplifiers will carry the music and addresses to all corners of the amphitheater.

In the event of rain, the service will be transferred to the great choir of the cathedral.

Parking Taboo On Wide Area To Rule at Fete

Virtually All Downtown D.C. Proscribed During Shrine Meeting.

The District Commissioners yesterday approved parking restrictions applicable to almost the entire center of Washington during the Shrine convention and provided a fine of $100 or an alternative 30 days in jail for any one parking an automobile within the proscribed zone.

This zone ranges from Second street northeast to Twenty-fourth street northwest. It includes Union Station Plaza east to Second street, south to Independence avenue, west to Maryland avenue, to the railroad tracks, on west to Fourteenth street and south on Fourteenth street. Fourteenth street, north to Constitution avenue, also would be proscribed. Thence the line would run west to Virginia avenue, to Twenty-second street, to H street, west to Twenty-fourth street, north to L, east to Twenty-first, south to K, east to Vermont avenue, northeast to Thomas Circle, southeast on Massachusetts avenue, all around the Public Library, and east on Massachusetts avenue to Union Station Plaza.

Ban On From June 9 to 15.

Parking under penalty of $100 fine was forbidden, 24 hours per day, from June 9 to June 15, inclusive, on each of the streets embraced in that boundary, with the exception of a few short blocks in the southwestern end.

The $100 no parking penalty also would apply to some streets outside the generally proscribed area, such as Twenty-second street northward, and North Capitol street northward to N street.

The proscribed area includes the most densely settled section of the city. District commissioners admitted that residents of the area could not find parking spaces in garages in their neighborhoods. So did William A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic.

Van Duzer proposed the restrictions, which he outlined on a map for the benefit of the commissioners. The commissioners, Van Duzer said, could have imposed a $300 fine. The Shriners are going to bring $12,000,000 into Washington, he explained.

"Are there adequate adjacent garage facilities for District residents in the zones where street parking is prohibited under this order for 24 hours a day for a week?" Van Duzer was asked.

Garages Lacking.

"I believe it is correct to say they are not," he replied.

"What are the thousands of District residents within the proscribed zone going to do?"

"I don't know," Van Duzer said.

Embodied in the order was a provision that, later on, there may be certain excepted areas set aside for the parking of Shrine automobiles.

The no-parking order, backed up with the $100 fine or 30 days in jail, was not as stringent as was the order issued in 1923, when the Shrine held its last convention in the National Capital, Van Duzer said.

"Then," he added, "there were half as many automobiles in Washington as there are now. This order represents what we believe will be the maximum we need. Maybe later it can be modified."

"Do you contemplate recommending its modification?"

"I can't tell. We'll have to wait and see how things work out."

"Does the order apply only during the time of parades?"

"No. It applies throughout 24 hours of each day."

"What about cars operated by business concerns?"

"Oh, we won't apply the ban to them. As a matter of fact, the order probably will be helpful to them."

"What about persons who want to park and go into a store for a few minutes?"

"They can't park."

Library Addition Hike Proposed by Barkley

Senator Alben Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, yesterday introduced a bill in the Senate to increase the authorization for construction of an audition to the Library of Congress from $1,500,000 to $2,866,340.

The original act was passed by Congress on June 13, 1930, but the money has never been appropriated.

own labor than to buy food and clothing for them with relief funds. After the November elections, Harry Hopkins barnstormed the country telling business men who wanted to economize on relief costs that a cheaper form of relief was to set the unemployed to work making their own things. Curiously enough, business men decided that they didn't want cheap relief at any price which would involve a reduction in FERA's purchases from private business—again the vested commercial interest in the dole which is an ominous feature of that system.

At any rate, Sinclair adopted the modified EPIC plan and stood by his bargain. Later in the campaign, when it seemed expedient to abandon him, the Roosevelt people made much of the assertion that he had "run out" and gone back to advocating original EPIC in violation of his agreement. This excuse was pretty lame. Sinclair did indicate that the modified EPIC was only intermediate to the original EPIC, but that was no more than was required by practical politics, in view of the enthusiasm of his followers for the original plan, and was also a perfectly normal adaptation of the principle of "gradualism" to social reforms.

As a matter of fact, the Roosevelt-Sinclair love feast was only grin-deep. After his nomination, Sinclair came East to meet the President, and the latter wanted to be on friendly terms with a man who had brought such voting strength into the Democratic Party and had won control of that party in so important a State as California. The two men had a long, friendly talk at Hyde Park, from which Sinclair emerged spouting praise of the wonders of F. D. R. Then he ran down to New York, where he had a lovely talk with Jim Farley, and on to Washington, where he saw Hopkins, Ickes and other big shots of the New Deal left wing. He got plenty of encouragement, but no promises of campaign support. Hopkins, in his usual impulsive manner, blurted out to the press his own hope that Sinclair would be elected. "He's on our side, isn't he?" asked Hopkins. The question answered itself.

Roosevelt Afraid Of Backing Loser.

Sinclair was on the side of the New Deal. He went to extremes in order to control his rather undisciplined nature and become a loyal lieutenant in a national liberal movement under Roosevelt. It was true that he needed Roosevelt's help to be elected Governor of California in 1934, but it is also true that Roosevelt may need Sinclair's help to carry California in 1936 — and California decided the fateful election of 1916. It is a fact that Roosevelt deserted Sinclair, for reasons which seemed convincing at the time—an act which may prove to be a greater blunder than Hughes' historic snubbing of Hiram Johnson in 1916. Naturally, Roosevelt counts on Hiram to deliver California to him in 1936. Hiram, having gathered every nomination, except the Socialist and Communist, for the senatorship in 1934, kept his hands off the fight for the governorship, although a word from him would have elected Sinclair. Hiram is a potent figure and a great progressive "boss," but in an open test of popular following between him and the EPIC Tarzan it is by no means certain that Johnson would have a walk-over.

The apparent reasons which led Roosevelt to desert Sinclair are persuasively advanced by apologists for the Administration in this episode.

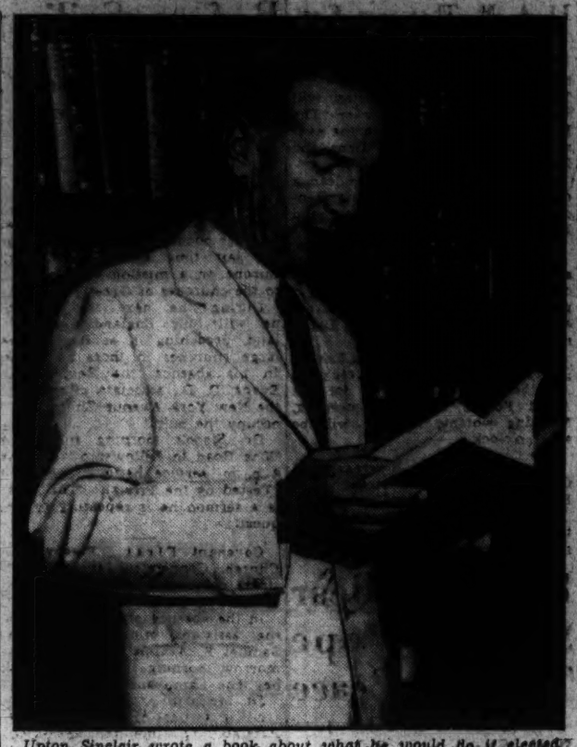
There is no percentage in backing a loser, especially if that loser is too closely identified with your policies.

It is, moreover, bad politics for a President to tangle up in State fights. It is true that Roosevelt gave a left-handed indorsement to Bob La Follette and that he tried to keep on friendly terms with Olson and Shipstead, the Farmer-Labor leaders, although in the latter case his political mechanics, Farley and Hurja, backed the regular Democratic candidates. It is also true that, through Farley, he tried to defeat Bronson Cutting in New Mexico, and failed. But, the general strike in San Francisco had made California pretty jumpy, and both precedent and common sense dictated that the President should not get out too far on the EPIC limb in California where there was a fair possibility of a Fascist coup d'etat if Sinclair should be elected.

Moreover, Sinclair's modified EPIC, though perfectly consistent with the New Deal, was not identical with the program on which Roosevelt was working, and although it was true that the latter had set the unemployed to work in producing their own goods, he had never regarded these "islands of socialism" as more than safety zones, and proposed instead to enable everybody to get a job in the capitalistic system. His real approach to the problem is to set the unemployed to work at conserving natural resources, improving the national plant, developing those long-range projects which are necessary for future prosperity but which, because they operate over several generations, offer no appeal to the profit motive, and to let the unemployed buy their goods through the regular channels. His $4,880,000,000 work relief program is the New Deal alternative to EPIC.

Accordingly, Roosevelt was merely pleasant to Sinclair, and if Sinclair believed that Roosevelt promised to issue a statement or make a speech on "prdouction for use" before the end of the campaign—which would have helped Sinclair's candidacy immensely—it was probably just another of those misunderstandings that grow out of Roosevelt's amability. Certainly the statement was not made. Farley, on the other hand, maintained officially the correct machine politician's point of view. He told the politicians who inquired as to his attitude: "Sinclair won in the primary. The party should support the popular choice."

However, before the post-primary campaign had far advanced, Roosevelt was badly on the spot. While Sinclair had dodged the general strike issue by saying that if he had been Governor there would have been no occasion for the strike, the conservative leaders of California—the Gianninis, Hearst, Harry Chandler—began sounding the tocsin of Red Revolution in the Grizzly Bear Republic of the Golden West.



Upton Sinclair wrote a book about what he would do if elected Governor of California.

Blonde Stenographer Blamed by Farley.

Sinclair did not have a single newspaper in his favor. At the same time, Roosevelt was subjected to constant pressure to repudiate Sinclair. The Giannini interests, among the chief backers of the New Deal on the West Coast, went to lengths to secure a White House rebuff to the official Democratic candidate in California. Roosevelt held off until he saw that Sinclair would probably be licked, if only on the old American principle which holds, "I do not care who casts my country's votes, so long as I may count them." Then Sinclair was repudiated, via a statement from George Creel, and Jim Farley followed suit by repudiating the "blonde stenographer's error," which had resulted in a letter urging support of the full ticket, including Sinclair. This letter had reached California and been published in Sinclair's EPIC News. At the same time that the forces supporting the Republican candidate, Frank Merriam, were attacking Sinclair as a Communist and an atheist, the Communists, and even the orthodox New York Socialists of the Norman Thomas school, derided him. Altogether it was a disgraceful performance and a sardonic travesty on the meaning of democracy when a candidate proposes an orderly change in economic arrangements.

Even so, the issue was in doubt up to the end and Merriam, to help in the fight, had to come out with a ringing indorsement of the Townsend Plan for Old Age Revolving Pensions of $200 a month, thus cutting into Sinclair's southern California vote. Raymond L. Haight, the Progressive Commonwealth nominee, tried to hold a middle ground between the Republican reactionaries and the radicals and met the usual fate of middle-grounders. He failed to win Sinclair's radical following, while many conservatives who preferred him to Merriam, voted for the latter for safety's sake. In spite of all this, Sinclair more than doubled his primary vote, making large gains in central California, where labor was bitter against Merriam and his reactionary backers as a result of the suppression of the general strike.

The official count was, Merriam (Republican), 1,128,000; Sinclair (Democratic), 879,000; Haight (Commonwealth), 302,000. Merriam is a minority Governor.

EPIC did not die with the election. The logic and popular pressure behind it are so strong that Merriam indicated that he would adopt part of the plan as a matter of temporary necessity. Contrary to his campaign pledges, he was forced to come in with a higher tax program, for which he was sternly rebuked by the Republican newspapers, even though the emphasis was on the sales tax and not on incomes. Yet the forces of the EPIC campaign are still strong and are organized in every county and most precincts, under a program to recall State legislators and officials and to employ the initiative and referendum on a wide scale to enforce the plan. July, 1935, has been tentatively set as the deadline, a fact which probably accounts for the feverish reports of optimism and prosperity which drift back East from the Pacific Coast, as possible advance signs of a psychological movement to identify the G. O. P. with good times, as of yore.

Sinclair is not through. After publishing a new book, "I, Candidate for Governor, and How I Got Licked," he prepared to move again at the right time, which may be this summer and again may be in 1936. While indicating that he might not again be a political candidate, he did not lay aside his new-found career as a political boss. There is little doubt that he can not easily be dislodged from his majority control of the Democratic Party in California, if he keeps his wits about him. He is not talking of a third-party movement except as a possibility if Roosevelt continues to dicker with the bankers and political standpatters and continues a policy of scarcity. Sinclair is on the inside of the Democratic Party for the present, whether the machine Democrats welcome him or not. If he sees a chance to close with poor old Frank Merriam, he might use the California initiative and referendum to nip in and repeal the sales tax and replace it with a tax on wealth.

It is hard to imagine Sinclair—with his intense sincerity, his crystalline intellect and his personal asceticism—supporting Huey Long in 1936. He is too much of a socialist to have anything to do with anything which even remotely suggests fascism. But both he and Long might find a satisfactory third candidate, and if so, Sinclair's indefatigable typewriter, his fluent and crackling phraseology, and his reputation for disinterested public spirit, would be a force to be reckoned with in a national campaign. He would prefer, however, to go along with Roosevelt, but only on the condition that the latter salvages the New Deal and moves it far enough to the left in 1936 to arouse the enthusiasm of Southern California. That this may be necessary in any case, and irrespective of EPIC, is suggested by that other "Plan" produced in southern California—Dr. Townsend's old-age revolving pensions.

Italy Masses Boy Adherents On War Date

Mussolini Tells Throng of Celebrators Nation Must Be Strong.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 24.—Fascism paraded its youngest adherents today as massed thousands of soldiers and civilians, celebrating the twentieth anniversary of Italy's entry into the World War, heard Benito Mussolini declare the nation now "ready for any trial."

A feature of the day's exercises was the first appearance of the "Sons of the Wolf," the newest Fascist organization made up of boys 6 to 8 years old, which was constituted at the end of 1934.

They wear black shirts and green shorts similar to those worn by the "Balilla," the organization of boys between eight and fourteen, with the addition of white bands crisscrossed on their shirt fronts.

Il Duce, who passed the Fascist review on the Via Del Impero, the new street completed between Mussolini's office in Venezia Palace and the Coliseum, later addressed troops and Black Shirts assembled in the Venezia Square.

The words of an unknown Italian soldier scrawled on the wall of a house demolished by a shell, "It is better to live one day as a lion than 100 days as a lamb,' are not merely an order—they are gospel for us," Mussolini said.

"Let no one in Italy or abroad delude themselves. Italy will consider carefully before arriving at a decision, but when the decision is reached, then she will go forward without any turning back. * * *

"It is necessary, once we have started to burn our ships and guide ourselves along the road of destiny with a firm hand."

The premier's speech was made shortly after King Victor Emanuel, in Mussolini's presence, presented battle flags to the 16 new regiments, making up six new divisions, created to take the place of detachments sent or destined to be sent to East Africa.

Presentation of the banners, which took place at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, was the first public acknowledgment that six army divisions are to go to East Africa, where Italy has been having border difficulties with Ethiopia. Official communiques thus far have mentioned only three.

Earlier in the day, Mussolini presided at a Fascist levy in which Fascist youths reaching certain age limits entered higher categories. Half a million of the nation's youth, boys and girls 8 to 20 years old, stood at attention in hundreds of towns and cities throughout the nation to take an oath of fidelity to the leader.

Members of the fire rescue squad revived Mrs. Alice Eidhammer, 28, of the 1200 block of Twenty-first street northwest, who was overcome by gas in the kitchen of her home yesterday afternoon.

Discovered by her sister, Lucile Randolph, of the same address, Mrs. Eidhammer was sitting in a chair with her head in the oven of the stove. Gas was flowing from a jet.

She was revived and after treatment by an Emergency Hospital physician, her condition was described as not serious. Her sister said that she had been in poor health.

Pontiff Decries Reich Practice Of Sterilization

Lauds Doctors, Congress for Dropping Eugenics From the Agenda.

By the United Press.

Vatican City, May 24.—Pope Pius XI today denounced Germany's human sterilization policy and told a group of 450 physicians during an audience that "sterilization would be one of the greatest evils of mankind if practiced generally."

"We praise you for your achievements in surgery," the holy father told the physicians, here attending the International Hospital Congress in Rome.

"We also praise you for dropping eugenics and sterilization from the agenda of your congress, inasmuch as these subjects did not fit in with the needs of the congress.

Hits Nazi Paganism.

"We have numerous friends in the scientific world in Germany" he continued, extending his attack to the Nazi pro-paganism propaganda, "but should Germany's program for full paganism be extended or accepted by other countries, incalculable evils would spread to all mankind.

"Our mind regarding eugenics was fully manifest in our encyclical 'Cast Conubii,' and the Church's doctrine on this has been illustrated by many authoritative expounders."

The pontiff, referring to the remarks of some medical delegates to the congress that other nations soon would imitate Germany's policy on eugenics and sterlization of certain types of people, including the insane, habitual criminals and diseased, added:

"Should this occur, it would constitute one of the greatest evils for mankind. It would mean a return to paganism as synthesized in the stupendous words of St. Paul: 'Without love, without merci.'"

Berlin, May 24 (U.P.).—An Official announcement on sterilizations in Germany through December 31, 1934, today showed 56,244 persons had undergone this social operation in less than two years of Nazi rule.

The report said that up to that date, 82,525 applications had been made, of which 42,903 were men who desired to be immune to fatherhood.

A total of 3,692 applications were rejected, and the others remain under consideration by the authorities, the report said.

The greatest number of applicants were in the Dresden district.

Death at Bridge Held Accidental

Jury Gives Like Verdict in Auto Tragedy.

A verdict of accidental death was brought in yesterday by a coroner's jury which investigated the tragedy at the Calvert Street Bridge, May 13, when a scaffold fell, killing James Beattie, 57, a foreman, and injuring five laborers.

Evidence was presented showing that the breaking of a board caused the scaffold to fall, hurtling Beattie and his companions 32 feet to the ground. Beattie had been an employe of the John W. Cowper Co., the firm building the bridge, for 20 years.

The jury returned a similar verdict in the death of Edith Mae Rhon, 4, colored, of 1213 Q street northwest, who suffered fatal injuries when she was struck by a truck driven by Chester Jefferson, 44, colored, of 1206 Delaware avenue southwest. The accident occurred in front of her home.

Man's Pocket Picked.

Kenneth Jenkins, 3900 block of Connecticut avenue, told police that his pocket was picked yesterday while he was in the Great Eastern bus station at Twelfth and H streets northwest. The thief got $17 in bills and a watch worth $15.

two stranded and hungry Americans at Letuga Bay, Alaska.

The minesweeper Sandpiper came upon the stranded men, E. T. Forsythe and H. B. Morris, during the maneuvers. Lieut. Comdr. T. H. Robbins, of the Sandpiper, reported he took them to Sitka, Alaska.

The loss of six men last Tuesday aboard the naval bomber 6P7 south of Midway Island was made the subject of a message of condolence by Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, to Admiral Joseph M. Reares, commander of the 166 warships involved in the operations.

Message of Sympathy.

To the squadron command and "especially to those directly concerned," Admiral Standley conveyed "deep sympathy for the loss of the officers and men of the 6P7 who gave up their lives in the line of duty."

"This is another example," said Standley, "of the willingness of the Navy personnel to undergo in peace time the risks and hardships always prevalent in order that the training essential for efficient operation may proceed uninterruptedly."

Arrangements were made to receive the famous VP-10 Air Squadron after dark.

The VP-10 group made aviation history in January, 1934, with a nonstop precision formation flight from California to Honolulu, 2,400 miles. It led the 43 planes which made the spectacular flight out of Pearl Harbor to the mid-Pacific area two weeks ago, and it undertook today's nonstop flight.

Flag Bedecked City.

Honolulu suddenly bloomed with flags and other gala attire as it learned of the approach of the great naval force.

The Pearl Harbor commandant announced arrival times for more than 90 of the 166 ships of the fleet within two days.

Fifty-seven other ships were scheduled also to enter the harbor in an attempt to test the strategic value of massing the entire fleet at the base here.

Because channel improvements have not been completed, it was announced no attempt would be made to bring the big aircraft carriers into harbor and that they would anchor off Honolulu.

The city planned an array of festivities for 50,000 sailors.

Surface ships are due to move into harbor shortly after 7 o'clock tomorrow morning, marking completion of the second phase of the Pacific maneuvers. After a rest of several days they probably will shove off again for the final operations, which will be completed June 10.

Sailor Robbed of $110; Police Hunt Woman

Police yesterday were seeking a young blonde woman who robbed Benigno Gonzake, sailor from the Argentine naval training ship, Presidente Sarmiento, of $110.

Gonzake had considerable difficulty in telling the story of the robbery, which happened in the hallway of a house in the 700 block of Eleventh street southeast, as he knew little English and the police no Spanish.

The sailor brought a pocketbook which had been dropped by the woman. From cards found in it, police believe they have learned her identity.

Gassaway to Speak.

Representative Gassaway, of Oklahoma, will be the featured speaker at the Memorial Day services of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, to be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. at Cedar Hill Cemetery. All posts of the District Department of the V. F. W. will take part in the ceremony.

New Air Giant Flies Like Bird For U. S. Tests

Martin Clipper Rises From Chesapeake Bay in Twenty Seconds.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 24.—Tremendous power and quick getaway, coupled with amazing ease of control, were demonstrated today as the Glen L. Martin Clipper No. 7, largest flying boat ever built in America, began its official Government tests.

The 14-ton craft, propelled by four motors capable of developing 3,200 horsepower, rose from the waters of the Chesapeake Bay in less than 20 seconds, carrying ten men and a quantity of gasoline. It soared from the bay like a colossal bird, smoothly and with little apparent effort.

Automatic Pilot Works.

Once aloft, Chief Test Pilot W. K. Ebel and Assistant L. C. McCarty coupled up the automatic piloting mechanism built into the plane. They reported it worked perfectly, keeping the giant of the skies on its course without human effort.

Raymond B. Quick, Department of Commerce inspector, was on hand to observe the trials, concentrating upon the flying boat's safety factors rather than its performance. The craft now flies under an experimental number and must complete rigid Government safety tests, probably requiring several days, before it can be officially licensed.

The great clipper already had given a convincing display of its might. During preliminary trials early in March it established what was said to be an American weight-lifting record by taking 51,000 pounds full [illegible]. With this heavy load, the take-off was clocked at less than 60 seconds.

Among those going up in the ship today, in addition to the pilots and other representatives of the Martin company, were representatives of Pan-American Airways, for which it was built, and of the Pratt & Whitney Co., manufacturer of the motors.

Each time the gigantic winged craft roars aloft it draws that much nearer the transpacific service for which it was designed. Included in the company trials yet to be made are jaunts to Miami and return.

In the meantime, Martin engineers are checking the speed instruments, gasoline consumption, the automatic propeller pitch, carburetor fixtures and adjustments and the general handling of the boat.

Its full crew is six men. Luxuriously outfitted with Pullman accommodations, it can carry 48 passengers as a day plane and 36 when [illegible].

$155,000 in Additions For School Approved

Plans and specifications for an addition to the Hugh M. Browne Junior High School were approved by the District Commissioners yesterday. The school is located east of Twenty-fourth street and north of H street, both extended.

District architects estimate the addition and the necessary remodeling of the present building will cost between $155,000 and $160,000. There is available for the work an unexpended appropriation of $162,826.58. Bids will be asked for in the next few days.

Interment was in Fort Lincoln Cemetery. Services were delayed to enable Mrs. McLeod, who was in Texas, to return.

There was, for example, Paulino Uzcudun, who boasted that his lovely golden teeth made French girls swoon, and that time that Dempsey—but you'd best read the entire story.

Danish Legation Party Honors Royal Wedding

Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted Entertain Diplomatic and Official Society Celebrating Frederik-Ingrid Marriage.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

While official and diplomatic society in Stockholm attended the wedding yesterday of Princess Ingrid of Sweden and Crown Prince Frederik of Denmark, in the Storkyrkan Cathedral, Capital society celebrated the marriage at the Danish Legation, where the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, assisted by Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Minister of Sweden, received several hundred members of official, diplomatic and residential society. The Minister of Sweden, Mr. Wollmar Bostrom, was absent because of a slight indisposition, having recently sprained his knee while playing tennis.

Royal marriages are not so ordinary a thing as they were some years ago, and so when they do occur they are a great occasion for celebration. Mme. Wadsted, charming Uruguayan wife of the Minister, made a lovely picture in her gown of pale violet crepe, fashioned with a flowing skirt, and long fitted sleeves, with a huge bunch of Parma violets tucked in her belt. Mme. Bostrom wore an afternoon gown of pale beige chiffon printed with a delicate pattern in brown. Her wide-brimmed hat was of leghorn, trimmed with beige flowers. The drawing room itself is a beautiful room, furnished in gray and rose, with draperies of soft rose taffeta, and yesterday it was decorated with huge vases of mock-orange and pink snapdragons.

Most of the guests gathered on the veranda which runs across the back of the house and where boxes of bright red geraniums have been placed. In small pots, in wrought-iron holders, there are still more geraniums in red and pink, on the walls and columns of the veranda. And below, on the wide terrace, a large number of guests patronized the buffet. Others were in the dining room, where tea, coffee, ices and all kinds of Danish pastries were served, and still others gathered in the small sun-room for cocktails and the delicious hors d'ouvres for which the Scandinavian countries are justly famous.

Minister of Norway.

It would be hard to name all the members of the Diplomatic Corps who were present for, with very few exceptions, all were there. The Minister of Norway, whose country is so associated with Denmark and Sweden, was there with Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the latter wearing a frock of black and white printed crepe with a large black hat; the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos, so recently arrived and already so popular, was there, and not far away, a very jolly group which included the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite (the latter is Danish); the Rev. Dr. Coleman Nevils, S. J., president of Georgetown University, and Senator and Mrs. Henry Ashurst, all seeming very gay over some joke the minister had just told. Senator and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry were there, the latter wearing a costume of navy blue chiffon with a short cape of the same material closely shirred, and a blue straw hat, and Mrs. Truxton Beale in bright red with a black hat.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wearing black, and Mrs. Claude A. Swansen were seen chatting together, and nearby Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate and Mr. Ralph Hill from the State Department. Mrs. Harry Latrobe Roosevelt, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Eldridge Jordan were together, and with the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold Sims was Mrs. F. W. Bunker, in a smart costume of black with a white crepe coat and a wide black hat with a white crown.

Among the Senators' wives seen were Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, wearing a black and white printed crepe with a white hat banded with green; Mrs. Key Pittman, Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Daniel Hastings, in a suit of yellow tweed with a scarf of sables and a small brown hat; and, representing the House, were Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., and Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom.

Senora de Riano, wife of the former Ambassador of Spain, who has been spending the winter in Washington, was with her sister, Mrs. Chandler P. Anderson, and nearby were Mrs. Alex Legare and her daughter, Mrs. George Pulver.

Others Present.

Others, to name but a few present, were Mr. and Mrs. James M. Beck, the United States Minister to Rumania and Mrs. Leland Harrison, Baroness von Below, Judge and Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, Col. and Mrs. Arthur O'Brien, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Mrs. Henry C. Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Conn, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson and Mr. and Mrs. William M. Cushman.

Also Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock with Miss Dorothy Sollers, Miss Laura Harlan, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Harry P. Huse, Mrs. Francis Whitten, in black satin with a large black hat trimmed with tiny scarlet berries; Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, jr., Mrs. Pendleton Mayo, Mrs. Crosby Miller, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, the Misses Patten, the Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Roberts and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Owsley.

The party was from 4 until 6 o'clock, but the guests lingered long after that, and many who had seen the small son of the house watching the arrival of guests from his window, asked to see this very popular baby before leaving.

Later in the evening, the Minister and Mrs. Wadsted entertained at a reception and buffet for the Danish colony of Washington, when the guests toasted their crown prince and his bride, who by that time were en route to the Riviera for their wedding trip.

Argentine Ship Officers Feted By Ambassador

Cocktail Party at Embassy Another Gay Affair for Visitors.

The Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil entertained yesterday afternoon at a large cocktail party for the officers and midshipmen of the Argentine training ship, Presidente Sarmiento, which is now in the Washington Navy Yard.

Senora de Espil, wearing an afternoon frock of pastel chiffon, received her guests at the head of the long staircase of the embassy, and all stopped for a few moments to chat with her. The Ambassador divided his afternoon between the dining room, where the guests gathered, and the receiving room, where he joined his wife from time to time.

The midshipmen as well as the officers have had a gay time during their brief stay in the Capital, and yesterday they had a chance to meet many more Washingtonians. The Countess Van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, who is herself an Argentinian, was there, wearing a pale green crepe frock and a large black hat. And Mrs. Frank C. Letts, mother of Senora de Espil, who has just returned from spending the winter in New York, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, smart in navy blue, was present, as were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Commander and Mrs. Carey Jones, the latter in pale gray trimmed with gray fur, and a large gray hat; and many others.

Yesterday nobody was paying much attention to the Washingtonians present, so interested were they in making the acquaintances of the attractive young officers and the gay midshipmen, in their smart uniforms.

The 12-year-old daughter of Senora de Espil, who was there, was completely surrounded by a group of the youngest midshipmen, whom she was chatting to in English, while they answered in Spanish. It was a gay and delightful party which the young visitors will not soon forget.

O. Millar, Front Royal, Va., for her recipe for chocolate pie. The recipes:

Chip Chocolate Frozen Custard.

1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon corn starch
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups scalding milk
3 eggs beaten
1 cup whipping cream
2 teaspoons vanilla

Blend the sugar, cornstarch and salt together. Add the scalding milk and cook over hot water ten minutes, stirring often. Add gradually to the beaten eggs, stirring constantly and return to the double boiler and cook three minutes. Chill thoroughly, fold in the whipped cream and vanilla and freeze in refrigerator tray. Add desired amount of chipped sweet chocolate, about one cup.

Russian Chocolate.

Pour 1½ cups boiling water over 1½ teaspoons tea leaves. Let stand 3 minutes. Strain. Melt in top of double boiler, 1½ squares (ounces) bitter chocolate. Stir in ½ cup of sugar. Slowly add 3 cups whole milk (or 1½ cups evaporated milk diluted with 1½ cups water). Add tea and beat with rotary egg beater one minute to blend. Serve hot or iced. Serves six.

Gateau Chocolate Pomme de Terre.

(Chocolate Potato Cake).

½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup butter
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup warm mashed potatoes
2 cups cake flour, sifted three times
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
6 tablespoons cocoa
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter or margarine; add sugar and cream well. Stir in egg and plain mashed potatoes which must be smooth and warm, not hot. Add the flour, soda, baking powder and cocoa, all of which have been sifted together, alternately with the sour milk or buttermilk, but starting with the flour mixture to avoid curdling. Last stir in the vanilla and bake in two 9-inch layer cake pans for 20 minutes at 400 degrees Fahrenheit. Ice with a plain boiled icing as follows:

Boiled Icing.

½ cup water
1½ cups granulated sugar
⅛ teaspoon cream of tarter
½ teaspoon almond flavoring
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Stir the sugar and water and the cream of tartar together before putting on the stove. Boil this mixture until it spins a thread from a fork. Pour the mixture slowly over the stiffly beaten egg whites, beating constantly until stiff enough to spread. Add the flavoring and frost the cake with a broad knife. When the frosting has set, pour onto it from the center of the cake, one square of melted chocolate, allowing it simply to run over the top and sides, which, when cool will give a most decorative effect.

Chocolate Treats.

Melt chocolate covered peppermints over hot water. Spread on unsalted crackers. Sprinkle with chopped nut meats or shredded cocoanut. Serve with hot chocolate or coffee or malted beverage or with chilled pineapple juice for evening refreshments.

Chocolate Sponge.

1 package of granulated gelatin (1 tablespoon)
¾ cup cold water
¾ cup boiling water
1-3 cup of sugar
3 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ squares unsweetened chocolate
1 teaspoon vanilla

Put sugar, melted chocolate, salt and boiling water together and bring to boiling point. Remove from fire. Pour cold water in bowl and sprinkle gelatin on top of water. Add to chocolate mixture and stir until dissolved. Cool somewhat; add slightly beaten egg yolks and when mixture begins to thicken, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and flavoring. Turn into mold that has been rinsed in cold water, chill and when firm, unmold. Serve with whipped cream. Serves six.

Chocolate Pie.

4 squares chocolate
2 cups milk (scalded)
¼ cup cold milk
1½ cups sugar
5 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons butter
6 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vanilla
Baked pastry shell

Melt chocolate over low heat. Scald the milk in a double boiler, then add sugar and cornstarch, blended and mixed with the cold milk. Add butter and melted chocolate. Pour this mixture over the beaten yolks of the eggs, slowly beating as you do it. Return mixture to double boiler, add the flavoring and beat thoroughly with a rotary egg beater. Cool slightly and pour into previously baked pie shell. Pile high with meringue made of egg whites and ½ cup sugar. Bake in a slow oven for half hour.

Mrs. La Gorce Impressed By Customs in Orient

Underwood & Underwood.

American women generally know a good deal about beautifying their homes and making their households run smoothly, but they could take a few pointers along these lines from women of the Orient, where such a comparatively simple thing as the arrangement of flowers in a vase is part of every girl's education. So reports Mrs. John Oliver La Gorce, who recently returned with her husband from a trip around the world.

Wife of National Geographic Official, Back From World Tour, Says U. S. Women Could Learn a Lot From Asiatics.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN THE WIFE of a man who is both the vice president of the National Geographic Society and the associate editor of the National Geographic Magazine accompanies her husband on a trip around the world, she sees some things many tourists never hear of, and delves into much that even the seasoned traveler misses.

Thus Mrs. John Oliver La Gorce, who recently circled the globe with her husband, has come back with enough new and interesting facts to fill several books. But she will probably never find time to write them, because she tells about what she has seen far too entertainingly to shut herself away from her friends long enough to write a book.

Unlike Columbus who sailed West to meet the East, the La Gorces sailed eastward to overtake it, and arrived in the Orient in the early spring. Perhaps this is one reason Mrs. La Gorce is so enthusiastic about China and Japan. Perhaps this partially accounts for the fact she would rather go again to China than any country she has ever visited, and that she hopes she will always remember Japan as it was during Cherry Blossom time.

Observes Native Customs.

Judging from her description of what she saw during her four months of travel, Mrs. La Gorce didn't miss much. Glimpsing everything from the temples of India and the palaces of Angkor, China's "Forbidden City," and the snow-capped head of Fuji in Japan, she also spent much time observing the natives of these countries. What she saw in some cases has led her to believe that in many respects the American woman could learn a lot from her sisters across the Pacific. From the dainty, slant-eyed, kimono-clad women of Japan, she could, for example, learn the art of arranging flowers. For in that country you don't find any blossoms carelessly dropped into vases or crammed into low bowls. "Every flower is chosen with an eye to the beauty of the bouquet as a whole," according to Mrs. La Gorce, who further explained that a Japanese woman might spend a whole morning or even a day selecting blossoms, placing them just where they should be, and discarding each bloom that mars the symmetry or color scheme of the picture she has in mind. "But the result," said Mrs. La Gorce, "is always worth the time."

Important as is flower arrangement to the Japanese woman, however, she is even more concerned with mastering the art of serving tea, which in her country is much more of a ceremony than tilting a teapot over a cup, according to Mrs. La Gorce.

"In fact, the whole time I was in Japan I never saw tea poured from a pot nor drunk from a cup," she said. "A large bowl serves both purposes. It is passed from one person to another, and everybody takes a sip from it. Each gesture used in passing the bowl from one person to another means something. In order to understand the significance of every movement, you have to take lessons; and then more lessons, before you really know how to make, serve, and drink tea according to the prescribed rules of Japanese etiquette."

She also pointed out that the serving of tea is probably the most popular feminine entertainment in Japan, not only because it gives the Japanese hostess a chance to prove she has mastered a difficult art, but also to display her tea bowl (probably an exquisitely decorated, precious heirloom) her ivory ladles (with which she stirs the tea) her expensive brazier (over which the water is heated in the presence of her guests) and her daintiest napkins.

Mrs. La Gorce commented on the efficiency of Japanese women in keeping their small, matting-carpeted houses spotless and attractive. But in making their households run smoothly, the Chinese probably have a plan that is superior to that of women anywhere, she said. Mrs. La Gorce should know, for she had the special privilege of living ten days in a home in Peking, "the most fascinating city in the world."

"The mistress of a Chinese house is never bothered by the trivialities that beset many American housekeepers," Mrs. La Gorce said. "Everything is managed by a No. 1 boy," who hires and fires the other servants and manages every detail with the utmost care and conciseness."

Yet even considering such an advantage as having a "No. 1 boy," Mrs. La Gorce hasn't any desire to live permanently in China, nor to drink tea indefinitely in the land of the cherry blossoms, nor to wander the rest of her life through the temples of Angkor nor the showplaces of Siam. She confessed, in fact, that the very best part of traveling around the world is getting back to where a quarter-hour automobile trip will take you to the Capitol, the Lincoln Memorial, or the Washington Monument.

What Is Youth's Opinion on How to Make Most of College Study.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am about to graduate from high school. My parents are making considerable sacrifices to send me to college. I hope to be able to help by working in vacations, or possibly even during the term, to assist a little in paying my way. They think, and I hope, that a college education will help me in my life work.

* * * *

Will you advise me how I may best make my college career contribute to success in life? I do not know what I want to do as yet. I am sure there are many in my position.

ONE OF MANY.

Comment Invited.

DEAR ONE OF MANY: Because you have brought to light a quandary which must be teasing the minds of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of forward-looking boys and girls in this city at just this time, I have decided — as a worthwhile experiment — to put your question up to them for answer.

No more interesting and possibly no more constructive commentary on your problem could be obtained than from the mind of contemporary youth in the same predicament.

* * * *

What is the philosophy of the high school graduate today as he steps from the platform, diploma in hand, to approach his future which lies behind the opaque veil of tomorrow?

At this first crossroads in his life, is his objective definitely determined? only tentatively fixed? or, as in your case, wholly obscured by banked clouds of uncertainty, whether as to talent, ambition or direction?

* * * *

Is he convinced—or isn't he?—that college training is indispensable equipment for wresting from life position, power and the spiritual satisfaction known only to those who function fully?

If he believes in college training for life, why does he believe in it? How will he act to turn it to best account? If he trusts in college training without really knowing the ore he expects to sieve in process, can he approach the task thus blindly and carry anything valuable away? Is college life a polite pretext for procrascination in many cases?

* * * *

These are but a few of the questions which must be finding their answer in the minds of thinking boys and girls today. Won't some of the many who are thrashing out the problem give us the benefit of their conclusions? I shall reserve my own opinion for a few days, giving youth a chance to be heard. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Runaways Are Younger Than Ever, Survey Finds

Runaways this year are younger than ever before, according to a recent report of the missing persons bureau of the Salvation Army. Within the last four months this organization has been called upon to help in locating 238 missing persons, of whom more than 100 were boys and girls in their early teens.

The report also revealed that approximately twice as many youngsters run away from the city as run to it, and that those who go to New York are generally girls seeking stage careers.

Season Opens At Y. W. Lodge Next Saturday

Mrs. Potbury Is Director of Summer Residence in Cherrydale.

VACATION LODGE, the summer residence maintained by the Young Women's Christian Association of the District of Columbia, will open its twenty-fifth season June 1 with Mrs. Annie R. Potbury, of Chevy Chase, as director. Located in Cherrydale, Va., the lodge stands well back from Military road surrounded by green lawns and within the shadow of high trees. It has a large, cheerfully furnished living room with high panels, a screened dining porch, about 20 sleeping rooms and two large sleeping porches.

In the spring of 1909, the Indoor-Outdoor Club, the first business and professional women's club affiliated with the Y. W. C. A., was presented one acre of ground by Dr. Johnson, of Cherrydale, father of Margaret Johnson, a club member, upon which the present lodge stands. The club then set out to raise and pledge enough money to erect a building. The result was the dedication of the lodge in August, 1910. The following year the club presented the lodge, free of all debt, to the association. More land was later acquired by the association and an addition of the same type and style as the original building constructed.

Mrs. James Craig Peacock, chairman of the Vacation Lodge committee, together with the following members, Mrs. Luther Johnson, Mrs. Karl D. Loos, Mrs. Harold Brooks, Mrs. Rogers Arundell, Mrs. Frank Nesbitt and Mrs. Ross J. Rudd, has been preparing the lodge for occupancy during the 1935 season, which ends October 1.

Idle Artists Put to Work Teaching N. Y. Children

The above drawings were made by New York children taught by unemployed artists. Mrs. Frances Pollak, director of the teaching project, is shown explaining the exhibit at Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Examples of Their Work Are Being Shown at Corcoran Gallery by Mrs. Pollak, of State Relief Bureau.

IF FEWER artists of the next generation have to starve in garrets they may be grateful in part to the recent depression. A method whereby the unemployed artist of today may support himself and at the same time create an audience for the artist of tomorrow is being worked out in one of the emergency relief projects of New York City.

Mrs. Frances Pollak, director of art projects for the works division of the New York Emergency Relief Bureau, yesterday told how 10,000 school children in New York were being made art conscious and helped to creative self-expression through the teaching services of unemployed artists. After school these children attend art classes conducted by artists registered with the relief bureau. Classes are held for the most part in community houses in the congested parts of the city.

An exhibit of the work of these children is being shown by Mrs. Pollak at the Corcoran Art Gallery in connection with the meeting of the College Art Association.

Much Talent Discovered.

Frequently an artist who has had indifferent success in creative work may turn out to be an inspiring teacher of art, Mrs. Pollak has found.

"Artists and children are close together temperamentally," she said, "and these unemployed artists frequently have the ability to stimulate the imagination of children and draw out their artistic expression. Much talent has been discovered in the children who are receiving instruction under this art project. A most interesting development in this line has been the response of subnormal children to art instruction. These children may differ from other children in their mental processes but usually they have the same imagination and emotional reactions and can be led to express these through the medium of art. We have been especially encouraged by the way deaf and dumb children have responded to this art instruction."

While the art teaching project has enabled about 350 artists in New York to find a means of self-support, Mrs. Pollak sees in it something more than a bread-and-butter device.

"It is a new avenue to educational and social programs," she said. "Through this art instruction we are not only giving the artist on relief immediate aid, but helping him to readjust himself and find a place in the commercial world. Moreover, we are developing creative and cultural interests in children. Above all, we are building an audience for the artists of the future."

No Starving Geniuses Found.

In her wide experience with unemployed artists, Mrs. Pollak has yet failed to find a starving genius.

"The rule of the survival of the fittest has prevailed in the depression," she said. "That does not mean that there are not many persons of talent out of work, nor that it is not incumbent upon us to find economic outlets for them. But the artists of outstanding ability seem to have been taken care of. The younger, inexperienced artist and the one whose talent is not sufficient to survive intensive competition are the ones that need to be helped."

Besides teaching, poster projects offer a field into which Mrs. Pollak directs many unemployed artists. Mrs. Aubrey McMahon, executive secretary of the College Art Association, has charge of the mural projects for unemployed artists in New York.

Scientist Sees Abundant Life In Large Cities

Declares Close Association Tends to Bar Snobbishness and Intolerance.

THE MOST satisfying life will eventually be lived in great modern cities, Dr. Harry Stack Sullivan, of New York, psychiatrist and psychoanalyst, is convinced. In densely populated areas, unnecessary defenses usually break down, permitting tolerance to grow naturally, he believes.

The family living in rural surroundings can be almost a separate entity from the rest of the community, Dr. Sullivan pointed out recently in the course of a brief stay in Washington. It can easily become intolerant and snobbish.

"Those defenses against the rest of the world could be used by our grandparents, but anyone living in a big city today with people jostling against him wherever he goes, can't be very snobbish," the psychiatrist said. "Nor is he likely to be intolerant."

And one of the surest ways to achieve inner happiness, Dr. Sullivan declared, is to develop tolerance for the differences in others while retaining security in one's own differences.

Don't Be Ashamed!

"It's of tremendous value for a person to be unashamed and unapologetic for his differences, or peculiarities," he said. "Otherwise, there can be no inner security."

Dr. Sullivan, who specializes in psychiatry and psychoanalysis for adolescents, believes that youth, far from being the happiest time, is a time of stress and insecurity.

"Adolescents form the point of human progress into the future. They are occupied with finding how to live amid changing scenes. And because of the rapidity of modern change they never get enough from parents or schools," he said.

He is convinced the rate of social change would be tripled if adolescents could be provided with all the facts and insights they are capable of assimilating.

"We never give them as much as they can take care of," he said.

In Dr. Sullivan's opinion the family doesn't exist that can prepare its offspring for what it is likely to encounter. Narrowness of viewpoint is probably the most common fault.

"Too many parents," he said, "try to work out their own ambitions and disappointments through their children. Parenthood should terminate when its necessity has passed. If it continues past that point it is extremely unfortunate for the victim."

Dr. Sullivan derided the idea that valuable creative work is done only by those who have suffered or have been frustrated.

"It's absurd to think one must be miserable to do creative work. Poe would have written better than he did if he had been a happy, integrated person," declared the psychiatrist-psychoanalyst.

Blood Poision Easier to Avert Than Cure

Septicemia Takes Roots in Carelessness on Minor Wounds.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IT SOMETIMES happens that bacteria gain entrance to the blood and create havoc. In the presence of scarlet fever, meningitis and some other conditions we may expect that the organisms causing these diseases will be found in the blood stream.

On the other hand—and herein lies a serious phase of blood contamination—we do everything we can to prevent bacteria located on the skin, in infected wounds, around hangnails, in boils and in carbuncles, from reaching the blood. When such an accident takes place we say that the patient is the victim of blood poisoning. Even so slight an infection as that which may occur following a blister on the heel from a poorly fitting shoe may usher in a blood stream infection.

If the organisms are virulent, that is, if they produce poisonous toxins, and if they grow, we know that the infection is dangerous. The blood, however, has considerable power in clearing itself of small numbers of bacteria by filtering them out in the liver and the spleen, where they are destroyed. Only an overwhelming infection therefore, one in which the organisms are in tremendous numbers, is accompanied by serious illness.

Symptoms vary in intensity and are closely related to the type of bacteria present in the blood and to general body resistance of the individual. There is usually a high fever following an initial chill and the temperature will show a step-ladder rise. As a rule there are remissions, the temperature even dropping to normal or below only to be followed by another chill, another rise, and the destruction of important tissue. Headache is frequent, delirium is noted, particularly at night, and in certain cases there is marked rigidity of the neck muscles. If the lining of the heart is inflamed (endocarditis) a heart murmur usually appears. Sometimes the heart involvement may affect the muscle of the organ or the sac in which the heart lies (pericardium). Vomiting and loss of appetite are common. The diagnosis depends largely upon finding bacteria in the blood, although the character of the symptoms and the history of the case may render this procedure unnecessary.

Treatment consists of the prompt removal of any area of infection that may be found on the skin or elsewhere in the body. Absolute bed rest is required and fluid must be given in large quantities to assist the elimination of toxins. Blood transfusions offer real help in providing new blood elements and in supporting the patient's resistance. If a blood donor can be found who has recently recovered from the same type of infection, a transfusion of his particular blood is of the greatest value. Various anti-toxins have been used, but the reports of their value are not uniformly favorable. If the wound from which the infection has arisen is accessible, hot, wet dressings may assist the formation of a local abscess which can then be drained.

Prevention is of far greater importance than cure. Every tiny wound, the prick of a needle or of a pin, must be cared for promptly. Allow puncture wounds to bleed freely for a short time. Soap and water is an excellent cleansing agent. Where wounds can be irrigated with chlorine solution that plan is also advised.

As a rule bacteria will not seriously infect the blood unless the patient has become run down from overwork, loss of sleep, poor or insufficient food, or is the victim of some wasting disease. Exposed portions of the skin that are likely to be injured must always be kept as clean as possible and frequent washing of the hands with soap and water is a useful protective measure.

French Lingerie Adds Sauciness To D. C. Stores

Paris Cotton Designs Copied for Women Unable to Travel.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE WAS a time when only the woman whose pocketbook allowed her to commute between native shores and Paris could boast smart French lingerie. Other women were forced to content themselves with whatever the stores of this country provided or the dainty things they made by hand. It must be confessed, however, that in those days domestic lingerie did not have the flavor, sauciness and chic which it has today. But today there is no need to shop in Paris. Our own local stores bring us the best that is.

One of the leading department stores here is featuring copies of French lingerie designed by Dilkusha and Kotchoubey. Do not miss the display. You will find copies of Paris cotton undies which you have already heard so much about.

There are gowns, street and evening slips, cami-bras panties and chemises in batiste, lawn, dimity and gingham. The gowns are simply devastating. They are made of star printed dimity in navy blue or bittersweet, trimmed with white lace. Slit sleeves and decollete backs with perky bows give the final trim. And, ladies, the price is only $1.95.

Reminiscent of the little girl in pigtails era is a quaint petticoat made of plaid gingham, set off with two rows of ecru lace around the bottom. "Just when will I wear this?" you might ask. Why, under your suit or your taffeta dress. An evening petticoat made in the same quaint style is of striped lawn, white only. It is trimmed in dainty lace, has a four-gore bias with side fastenings. Both of these slips are modestly priced at $1.95.

The cami-bras, less of a camisole than it is a brassiere, is made of sheer, white checked nainsook. It is trimmed with a wide lace band around the top and boasts inconspicious narrow shoulder straps. Panties to match are available. Price $1.69 each.

As different from the old fashioned chemises as the airplane is from the one-horse shay is the attractive bobby suit chemise, also of white checked nainsook and trimmed with wide bands of lace.

Engrave Your Compact.

Your initial, your name, your school, or whatsoever you desire will be engraved on your compact while you wait, thanks to the new service recently installed in a G street store. Just drop by the compact counter and inquire about it. You'll learn that with any compact you purchase you are entitled to this service. Such compacts as you have to choose from! All sizes, shapes and colors. Myriads of designs!

If you take advantage of this offer now, you can buy an attractive double vanity, formerly $1.50, for $1.00.

Guest Cigaret Holders.

One of the most thoughtful conveniences that an up-to-date hostess can provide for her guests is an individual cigarette holder to make that after-dinner cigaret a real luxury. She will find packages of extremely attractive holders in the gift section of a local store. They are made of heavy paper, colored orange, green, white, yellow and flame, all gold tipped. There are also some in gold and black. A package of twenty is $1.00.

Now An Umbrella Hat.

The easiest way to bask on the beach and stay in the shade is to wear a large umbrella hat. Not only will one protect you from the rays of the sun, but it will cast a flattering shadow over your entire face. Maybe you think spring cart wheels have been overwhelmingly large or maybe you think grandma's sun bonnet was the best little shade caster ever. But no indeed, the combination umbrella hat really takes the cake.

It has a brim about two feet wide. It is cumbersome and heavy, though, for it is made of a light cotton print. If you haven't seen these hats, you've a treat in store for you. And won't you celebrate when you find they cost only $1.59.

Colored Closet Racks.

You've no idea how much one small closet will hold until you have equipped it with one of those amazing racks which you will find in a notions department of a downtown store. The rack is the simplest thing in the world to hang. A hammer and two tacks and it's up. And once up it provides a place for your shoes, hats, ties, scarfs, handkerchiefs and hose. Why not go down right away and select one in almost any color you like to hang on the inside of your closet door?

Attractive Luncheon Trays.

Some new copper and chromium luncheon trays are sweeping hostesses off their feet. They are handy little affairs that may be used for those gay, informal luncheons where each guest has her separate tray. They cost only 59 cents each. Ash trays to match are only 19 cents.

Sunday Permits Housewife the Time to Prepare A Tasty Breakfast for Leisurely Consumption

Take time out on Sunday morning to prepare Swiss shirred eggs for breakfast. They will take a little longer than the customary two-minute cooked egg, but the result is well worth the effort.

Eggs, Old Standby, May Be Served in More Elaborate Style.

SUNDAY BREAKFAST is probably the only one not consumed on the eat-and-run basis. It is the one breakfast at which all members of the family assemble. For that reason more attention can be given to its menu and dishes may be served that require time to prepare and a leisurely hour to consume.

Instead of having the old standbys such as bacon and eggs or plain egg omelet, why not become adventurous and serve some of the more elaborate egg dishes? Mastery of the preparation of egg dishes is a high art and the housewife who would add zest to her menus and express her creative cuisine powers should try her hand at some of the following:

Swiss Shirred Eggs.

3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
Salt and pepper
Eggs
Buttered crumbs
Swiss cheese, grated

Make a cream sauce with the butter, flour, milk and seasonings. When thickened and smooth, put a spoonful of sauce into each individual shirred egg dish, as illustrated. Drop two eggs into the sauce, and cover with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in a very moderate oven (325 degrees F.), until eggs are set. Sprinkle generously with grated Swiss cheese and return to the oven just long enough to melt the cheese. Serve immediately.

Baked Creamy Omelets.

2 slices bread
1 cup milk
6 eggs
Salt and pepper
Chopped onion

Crumble the bread and allow it to soak in the milk while the eggs are being prepared. Beat the eggs until light, add seasonings and then the bread and milk mixture. Bake quickly (360 degrees F.) in a well-greased shallow pan and when done roll as you would a jelly roll.

Apricot Omelet.

2 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
¾ cup milk
1 tablespoon butter
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¾ teaspoon salt
4 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon colored
4 eggs whites, stiffly beaten

Combine dry ingredients and milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 3 to 5 minutes) and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add butter. Cool slightly. Add egg yolks. Fold in egg whites. Pour into hot, buttered 10-inch frying pan. Cook over low flame 3 minutes. Then bake in moderate over (350 degrees F.) 15 minutes. Omelet is sufficiently cooked when a knife inserted comes out clean. Cut across at right angles to handle of pan, being careful not to cut all the way through. Spread with apricot jam. Fold and serve, dusted thickly with confectioner's sugar.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

The marriage of Ellen and Michael Dale was doomed to failure from the start because Mrs. Mallory resented having her daughter taken away from her. Ellen's mother fanned the girl's suspicions because Mike spent so much time with Marjorie Hutton. Mike had explained Marjorie was interested in buying a new car, and Ellen believed him until she saw them together herself one night. She wouldn't talk to Mike, but upon urging from her mother, filed a divorce suit. That was withdrawn when she discovered she was to become a mother, but the patched-up marriage hobbled lamely along even after Michael, jr.'s, arrival. Ellen finally decided to attempt a reconciliation, but found Mike with Marjorie at the office when he had said he'd be late because of "business." Ellen promptly packs her things and goes home again, this time with the baby.

MICHAEL called once on Ellen, after she had taken their child and left his home. She had asked him to, by note. They met, in Mama's little living room as impersonally, to judge from outer appearances, as though they had been strangers.

"I have wanted to talk to you—about the baby," Ellen said.

Michael flushed. Even until this minute he had hoped. "And I have wanted to talk to you about him."

"I realize," Ellen went on, weighing her words carefully, "that it isn't fair to take him away from you entirely. Just as you say, he is your baby, too, and you—you haven't done anything to lose his respect or his regard. I want you to have the opportunity to see him—often."

"I've missed the little fellow more than I could ever tell you," Michael said.

Must See Baby.

Ellen nodded. "I know. So I wanted to say, Michael, that if you want to take him home sometime—for a day or two, to your mother's, I'll understand. He can go. I know that it wouldn't be so pleasant for you, coming here to see him."

"No," Mike said.

"He's getting to be a big baby," Ellen said. "He grows by leaps and bounds. I can just see him grow every day. No, Michael, I thought—just the other day—it isn't fair to keep the baby away from you. No matter what you and I think of each other, I wouldn't . . . I couldn't be mean."

"Ellen, will you bring little Mike and come home?"

Ellen looked long into her husband's eyes. If he had said, "Please come home. I love you and I miss you. Ellen, I can't live there without you." But he hadn't. He hadn't said any of those things. He had just said, "Will you bring little Mike and come home?"

"No, Michael. I—I can't. Oh, I know everything that you'd say. A child of divorce is pitiful—and that it should happen to little Michael." She brushed the bright tears from her eyes.

"But I think there are things worse than divorce for a child to bear, Michael—parents, living in a home without love, maybe quarreling all the time—being untrue to each other. No, Michael, I won't come back."

"I wrote a check," Michael said. "It's to take care of the baby. There'll be another one like it each month."

Didn't Want Money.

"I don't want the money," Ellen explained. "I'm working. I won't take the money."

"You must take it, Ellen," Michael told her desperately. "If you're away they must take the best care of the baby. You'll have to hire help, to be sure," and Michael put his check on the table and went away, even more desperate than when he had come—if that could be possible.

Mama came in shortly after Michael had gone and found the check. She made no effort whatsoever to conceal her elation. "That's exactly as it should be. I wondered. I just wondered if you were going to let Michael Dale off without making him pay a cent."

"I've got my job back. I don't need his help, Mama," Ellen argued. "And I don't want to take his money. I'd feel better never to take a penny of it."

It Was His Duty.

"Don't be foolish, child. You've got the baby to support. It's Mike's duty."

"To help support the baby—yes. But not to give me any money."

"Well, then, foolish, take the money for the baby's sake."

"But I wouldn't take that much. He said he meant to give me that amount each month. It doesn't take much to take care of little Mike and Michael can't afford it."

Mama finished the argument. "You should decide whether Mike Dale can afford to take care of his child. Better take it. Mark my word, it won't be coming long. Everybody tells me that Marjorie Hutton is making a dead set at Michael. It will only be a matter of days until she's got him landed. Then you won't have sueh luck getting money out of your precious Michael. You'd better take it now while the taking is good."

But Ellen folded the check and put it away in an inner pocket of her purse. She did not want Michael Dale's money. Not for worlds would she touch a penny of it—even for baby Mike.

The summer passed swiftly enough. If any person had told Ellen that she could go back to Mama's with her baby, start work and say a positive goodby to Michael Dale and yet capture even a semblance of peace, Ellen would not have believed it.

And yet that was exactly what had happened. Ellen admitted, to herself, that it was her return to the sport she loved—tennis. Never would she have admitted, even to herself, that the adoration of young Milford might be responsible.

He enjoyed tennis as she did. Every day they played it, arranging match after match. Ellen gloried in her growth of skill and power, and Milford, openly adoring, fed her self-esteem.

Ellen had set her heart on the impossible—winning the coming national tennis tournament.

Milford knew she could win—told her so repeatedly.

They grew to be great friends.

He had even ventured to discuss her marriage with her.

"I met Mr. Dale at the Tuesday luncheon club," he ventured.

They were resting after a strenuous series of games. Ellen, fingering her tennis racquet thoughtfully, did not look up. "Like him?"

"Yes."

"Well, he's a likable fellow. Interesting."

"I thought so." And then, gathering his courage, "Ellen, do you—will you ever go back to him?"

Ellen's answer was forthright, "No, Ben, never."

"Then there might be—there might be a chance for—for me?"

Mother Not Home.

Ellen shook her head. "Right now, Ben, there's not a chance for anything but that tennis match. Come on. Let's up and have at it. Every game I play makes my chances just that much better."

It was that very night that Mama failed to return home.

After their play, Ellen had sat for a long time on the porch with Ben Milford, discussing the match now less than a week away.

"I'm leaving in three days," she said, "and am I ever anxious?"

"That will put you in the East in plenty of time?"

"Two days before the start of the series. I want to practice a little and sort of get rested. Be there, on the ground."

"That's right. Catch your breath and the rest will be easy."

Champion Must Rest.

"I mean to bring back the trophy and the title, Ben." Ellen told him earnestly. "It'll be harder this time than last. Last time I had months of uninterrupted practice back of me. But this time——"

"Well, look who has practiced with you," Ben reminded her.

"Ben, I haven't forgotten. If I win you'll have your share of the honor."

"I don't want any of the honor," Ben told her unsteadily. "I want something a lot more precious. Do I—do I have a chance?"

"Maybe," Ellen said. "Who knows? But a champion must have plenty of sleep. Don't forget that."

"And a summer school teacher should have, too." Ben laughed. "Well, good night. And we'll play tomorrow night?"

"Yes. For the last time."

"For the last time? Don't say that. You mean for the last time this series?"

"Yes," and Ellen escaped from his eager, detaining hand.

In the house Aunt Ellen was fairly walking the floor in anxiety. "It's almost 12 o'clock. Your mother went away before 6 and said she'd be back by 9. If she doesn't come pretty soon, I'm going to call the police."

But Ellen argued against that. "She's all right. She's probably with Mr. Hardesty."

"She didn't say where she was going. But she was so insistent that she'd be home by 9. She fixed baby Mike's bottle and put him to bed and she said she'd be in before you got in."

"Well, she'll be here pretty soon, Aunt Ellen, you just be patient."

Misses His Dad.

"You never know what can happen these days," Aunt Ellen wailed. "She might be lying dead along some roadside. Stranger things have happened. Your mother's just like a child. She really doesn't show much sense."

"I know," Ellen laughed, "Mama's still in pigtails."

"But where is Bob?"

"In bed hours ago. And you ought to have seen the baby when he came in for his dinner. He just laughed and crowed to see him."

"Isn't it queer how babies love children?" Ellen queried. "It seems to me that Mikie likes Bob better than he does any of the rest of us."

"He misses his dad." Aunt Ellen said. "Babies are smart and don't you forget it. Bob, even though he's just a boy, reminds Mike of his daddy."

And Ellen's heart contracted in sudden pain at the thought that baby Michael must go through babyhood, and even into manhood missing his daddy.

Americans Grow Taller, Survey Of U. S. Reveals

AMERICANS are getting taller—not shorter, as has been popularly supposed. And all because of the fight that has been made against childhood diseases.

Prof. Frank Boas, head of the department of anthropology at Columbia University, says that during the last 70 years the stature of American men and women has increased two and a half to three inches and that of Europeans an average of two inches. This he attributes to the partial elimination of diseases in young children.

Dr. Boaz, according to the Columbia Alumni News, believes that further advances of medical science will produce even taller people, although he considers that a limit in height will finally be reached and that a race of giants will never be produced. In support of his theory, Prof. Boaz cited studies made recently among fathers and sons at Harvard University. The average height of the first generation, he said, was about 5 feet 8 inches, while the sons of these alumni averaged 5 feet 10 inches.

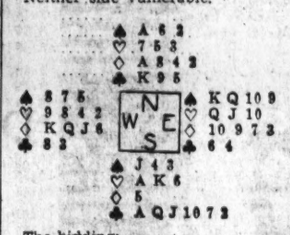
ELIMINATION PLAY

There are several varieties of forced lead or throw-in plays. What is colloquially called "the strip and end-play"—a dreadful term!—is based upon the elimination of the suits from the hand of the victim that would otherwise give him safe exit at the time he is thrown in the lead. What is usually called "the elimination play," possible only at a suit declaration, is based upon the elimination of the exit suits from the hand of declarer and dummy at a time when both hands still hold trumps. In this form the victim is deprived of exit by virtue of the fact that a lead from a neutral suit would allow declarer to throw in one hand and discard in the other.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1◇	Pass
3♣	Pass	5♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

The Play.

The opening lead was the King of diamonds, won in dummy with the Ace. The deuce of diamond was returned and ruffed by declarer with the club ten. The deuce of clubs followed and was won in the dummy with the nine, and the four of diamonds returned and ruffed with the Jack in the closed hand. Dummy was re-entered by leading the club seven and overtaking with the King.

Dummy's last diamond was led and ruffed, which eliminated the suit from the North-South hands. Declarer then led the Ace, King and six of hearts, the last trick being won by East.

Unfortunately, East held the three adverse spade honors and was forced to lead the King, which was allowed to hold. East had to continue the suit, letting the Jack make as well as the Ace, and so allowing declarer to make contract.

Graduates Still Find Jobs Scarce

Columbia Study Discloses Slight Gain in Work.

College graduates still are finding jobs scarce, according to W. Emerson Gentzler, secretary of appointments at Columbia University.

Although large corporations are taking on more graduates this year than at any time since 1930, private industry can not absorb all the graduates seeking work, Mr. Gentzler said. He reported increases of jobs in the field of chemistry, engineering and geology, but said small business concerns were hiring virtually no new men.

"Unless new fields of employment are opened soon to college graduates," he pointed out, "they will have to begin competing for positions heretofore taken by high school graduates.

Government service, Mr. Gentzler believes, offers the greatest possible source of employment that can be developed for college men and women. Architecture and law are the most overcrowded professions, he said.

Traffic Study To Be Opened By Motor Club

Special Committee Named to Pass on Proposals of Roberts.

How to make Washington streets safe for human life, with respect to both pedestrian and motorist, will be the subject of a study by a special committee of the advisory board of the District of Columbia Motor Club, when it takes up the three-point traffic improvement program advanced by People's Counsel William Roberts.

George W. Offutt, chairman of the motor club's advisory board, announced today the personnel of the committee which will make the study. He named Walter B. Guy, local attorney, as chairman, but the latter, informed of this fact by The Post, said he doubted the propriety of serving because he owns some Capital Transit stock and questions will come up which affect the street car lines. Among these, Guy named the suggested subways through Thomas and Dupont Circles.

Other members of the committee named by Offutt were Harold Doyle, of the Thomas J. Fisher Co., realtors, vice chairman; Stanley M. Horner, automobile dealer; Robert Bundy, director of disaster relief, American Red Cross and president of the Montgomery County Citizens Association, and County Judge Clarence Ahalt, of Arlington County.

Roberts' traffic plan includes these features:

Provision for adequate parking downtown through government built and controlled garages; construction of subways through Thomas and Dupont Circles and more through traffic lanes, and construction of a public bridge over the Potomac River just below Great Falls instead of a private toll bridge to serve as a link in a proposed North-South highway. This latter proposal, if effected, would enable the routing of heavy through traffic around the city. As a related project, the old C. & O. Canal would be utilized for a high-speed artery from Washington.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

The first major consequence of Columbia's new policies, the Ex-Lax program, "The Big Show," goes off the air June 24. They had a choice of alternatives, to submit to strict censorship of their advertising copy and remain on the air until March, 1936, or leave. They chose the latter.

Rumor has it that the Lux Radio Theater, an NBC Sunday feature, will replace "the Big Show" on Columbia's Monday night program. This show will probably fill the hour from 8 to 9 p. m. Mondays, preceded by another former NBC feature, Pick and Pat, from 7:30 to 8 p. m. The theater show will make the change in the middle of July.

Dial twists for today:

Withers Stakes at Belmont Park are described on WJSV and WMAL at 3 p. m.

Walter Hampden, Doc Rockwell, comedian, and Willie Saunders, Omaha's jockey, are guesting with Al Jolson tonight, WRC, 8:30 p. m. Hampden will present a scene from "Cyrano de Begerac."

Norman Thomas explains "Taxation As a Means to Socialization," WRC, 1:30 p. m.

Los Angeles' second Music Festival, from the Hollywood Bowl, will be broadcast at 1:30 p. m., WMAL. Musical groups of the city's schools combine in harmonica, banjo and accordion bands, a high school orchestra and an all-city school chorus.

"Faust," sung by the Chicago Opera Company, is on WOL at 8:45 p. m.

Line-up on the Amateur Show, WJSV, 7 p. m. tonight:

Lois Rankin, 20, 3221 Mount Pleasant northwest, violin solo, "So Red the Rose."

Lars W. Sjostrom, 22, Herndon, Va., plays harmonica, guitar and sings and whistles his own composition, "Down in Old Virginia."

Elise Gordon, 201 Arlington avenue, Clarendon, Va., gives a Negro impersonation, "Eczema Goes for the Doctor," written by herself.

Lucy Elizabeth Millet, 18, 8612 Colesville Pike, Silver Spring, Md., sings "My Whole Day is Spoiled."

Walter A. Taylor, 25, Thirteenth Engineers, Fort Belvoir, Va., sings "It's Easy to Remember."

Robert McDonald, 22, 2800 Ontario road northwest, sings "Without a Song."

Charles Maxwell Hunt, 24, 1752 Church street northwest, whistles "Star Dust."

Jane Ella Jarrett, 22, McLean, Va., sings "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling."

Harry Abrams, 31, 3904 Kansas avenue northwest, who won the audience vote for the May 11 show, will make his first professional appearance Saturday.

Arthur Godfrey will be the master of ceremonies.

Judges so far: Ben Robertson, staff correspondent, Associated Press, and Stephen McDonoghue, science writer, Associated Press. Third judge not yet ready to be announced.

Hospital Employe Will Appeal Ouster

A. R. Todd Denies Charge of Cruelty to Patients.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., May 24. — Dismissed from the Western State Hospital here following an investigation of charges of cruelty, A. R. Todd, former attendant, has announced he will appeal to the special hospital board to set aside the ruling of Dr. Joseph S. DeJarnette, superintendent.

At a public hearing Tood was charged with choking a patient during an altercation in the dining room. At the conclusion of the hearing, Dr. DeJarnette announced that the evidence was conflicting, but that in view of the hospital's principle that the patient "is always deserving of the benefit of the doubt," Todd could either resign or appeal to the special board.

Todd maintained that he seized the patient when he attempted to hurl a heavy mug at another person. The patient was released, Todd said, after he promised not to cause any more trouble. Doctors testified that there were no marks of violence on the man.

Old Spanish Prisoner Racket Is Revived With Variations

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 24.—A variation of the old Spanish prisoner confidence game turned up here today. Postal authorities announced the receipt in Maryland of three letters asking aid for a Mexican prisoner with $185,000 to divide with his rescuer.

One letter was received by a firm in Crisfield, and two in Baltimore, one by a corporation and one by an individual.

The letters, which were written from Guadalajara, Mexico, began:

"Dear Sir—Due to a person who knows you and who has spoken very highly about you, I have made up my mind to entrust a matter of such delicate nature to your good self on which depends the future of my dear daughter as well as my very existence."

The letter informs its recipients that since the sender is in prison in Mexico it is impossible for him to get at a trunk in a customs house in North America in which he has $185,000, a third of which he is willing to give to his rescuer.

Since it is impossible to receive letters in jail the interested party is supposed to communicate with a man at the Hotel Royal in Guadalajara.

Signed with a letter "L," the letter is thought to have been sent out because of the success of the chain letters in this country.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 24.—Unanimous approval of the new State system of six parks was given tonight by the State Conservation and Development Commission as it completed its first official tour of the chain, which started last Sunday.

"Virginia may never become the richest State in the Union—that is, is may not have the most wealth and industry—but we have an atmosphere which can be neither bought nor made," said Commission Chairman Wilbur C. Hall as the party disbanded.

The group arrived tonight from the Staunton River State Park in Halifax County, which is a recreational area with a swimming pool for the benefit of southside Virginia.

In his enthusiastic endorsement of the State chain of parks, Chairman Hall was joined by the other members of his commission: Braden Vandevanter, of Norfolk; D. D. Hull, of Roanoke; Samuel Carter, of Bristol, and former Senator M. B. Booker, of Halifax, and J. A. Brown, business manager of the American Automobile Association, and H. E. Weatherwax, regional officer for the National Park Service.

Brown, departing for Washington, said: "I am amazed at the tremendous work the commission has done and is doing. I feel that their task has only well gotten under way and think the future success of the work is assured under direction of its able and energetic chairman. The parks that have just been inspected are bound to attract an untold number of visitors to the State. The work being done by the State officials will spur our association to cooperation with them to the limit."

Before making the final inspection in Staunton River Park—consisting of 1,200 acres located in the forks of the Dan and Staunton Rivers in Halifax County—the party was entertained at a hunting lodge near the park site by a group of Halifax citizens headed by Commissioner Booker and Senator William A. Tuck.

Nice Names 6 To New State Commissions

Col. Wilbur C. Miller to Be Chairman of Maryland Milk Control.

Dopkin and Rome Given Posts on Aid and Charities Board.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 24.—Gov. Harry W. Nice announced today the appointment of the three members of the milk-control board authorized by the recent General Assembly and a like number to the State board of aids and charities, also in accord with recent legislation.

For the milk-control board the Governor named Col. C. Wilbur Miller, Baltimore County, chairman; former Senator David G. Harry, Harford County, both Republicans, and A. M. Knapp, of Catonsville, Democrat. To the charities board he appointed Lee L. Depkin and Morris A. Rome, of Baltimore, and Thomas B. Finan, of Cumberland.

The Governor pointed out that Col. Miller is one of the largest milk producers in the State. Former Senator Harry was chairman of the milk committee which formulated the present legislation, the Governor said, and an extensive dealer in milk. The Governor also pointed out that Mr. Knapp also is familiar with the milk situation.

Depkin Praised.

As to his appointments to the aids and charities board, the Governor issued the following statement: "Under recent legislation, the old pension law becomes operative through administration by the Board of State Aid and Charities. I am deeply interested in the success of this measure, and I can think of no man more familiar with the subject, better qualified, or possessing a greater interest than Mr. Depkin.

"As a matter of fact, he was the chairman of the committee appointed by me to prepare the measure. In his appointment I feel that I have guaranteed the successful operation of this most remedial legislation.

Woman Asserts Roads Opened To Liquor Load

'Blockade' Described to Court in Roanoke 'Plot' Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 24.—Probably the best known "pilot car" driver in Virginia's bootlegging history—a woman—said in Federal Court here today that on two occasions of which she knew roads that had been blockaded by Franklin County officers were cleared after alleged bootleggers had talked with officials, and liquor loads went through.

Willie Carter Sharpe, the woman pilot, said that, when she had a "date" in 1929 and in 1930 with T. J. (Jeff) Richards, he told her $825 she helped him count had been collected from manufacturers and sellers and was to be divided between him, C. C. Lee and Edgar A. Beckett.

Tells of "Protection" Talks.

Richards, a deputy sheriff in Franklin County, was shot down in ambush last October and is an alleged co-conspirator in the trial of alleged Franklin County liquor conspirators. Lee, the Commonwealth's attorney in Franklin, and Beckett, former State prohibition officer, are indicted.

The woman, formerly of Roanoke, testified that Richards discussed "protection" with her on several occasions at Ferrum and Calloway.

"I don't know hardly how to explain it," she said. "He used to tell me where the law was at and at what times I could go through," she added.

Says She Received $25.

Asked by the prosecution if she knew what was done with any of the $825 of which she told, she said, "I got $25 of it."

Richards told her, the witness testified, "that there were certain people he wasn't supposed to bother," but asked whether he named them she replied, "I don't know whether he did or not."

Lee, Beckett, Richards and Charley Rakes—Rakes also is deceased and an alleged co-conspirator—were the four officers with whom she said alleged bootleggers talked when roads were blocked. The Government asked if she had ever been stopped by a blockade and she replied, "I can't say that I've ever been stopped, but the roads have been blockaded twice."

Man Is Seized In Gun Battle As Auto Thief

Suspect Shot in Exchange as Virginia Nurse's Car Is Recovered.

By the Associated Press.

South Boston, Va., May 24.—The automobile taken from Mrs. Frances Perry, Halifax County health nurse, Monday by a man who threatened her with a pistol was held today by Atlanta, Ga., police who recovered it from a robber in a running gun battle.

The man driving the car in Atlanta was in a hospital suffering from wounds received when he exchanged shots with officers after holding up 15 persons in a drug store.

He gave his name there as William Ross, of Suffolk, Va., but Georgia officers said they found in his possession a seaman's discharge made out to William H. Fowler.

Mrs. Perry's car was taken from her by the driver of a car that had collided with another machine on the South Boston-Richmond highway, injuring Richard Glass, Clover, Va., farmer. The nurse stopped to offer assistance when the motorist pointed a pistol at her and commandeered her car, leaving Glass with a broken leg and dislocated shoulder. The car abandoned by the stranger bore Maryland and Pennsylvania tags.

Atlanta police said the man held there would be tried on robbery charges.

Byrd Replies To Criticism From Labor

Senator Sees Animus in Virginia Group's Condemnation.

Support of President Called Dictator of Vote.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Byrd, of Virginia, said yesterday, in answering a circular distributed at the Virginia Federation of Labor convention, that "my term as Senator may be as short as my enemies predict, but at least I will retain my own self-respect."

The Virginian made a detailed answer to charges circulated at the recent convention in Portsmouth.

"I want the people of Virginia to know," he said, "why I was denounced.

"The political animus inspiring the resolutions attacking me becomes apparent, as in the bill of particulars I am condemned for not supporting labor when in each instance I voted with the President, and then I am in the same resolutions denounced for not cooperating with him."

He did not include the Wagner labor disputes bill in the category of legislation which the President opposed, but asserted regarding that that while approving collective bargaining, "I can not approve coercion and intimidation." He said he would have voted for that measure had it been modified as proposed by Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland.

Without referring to William Green, American Federation of Labor president, by name, Byrd took note of Green's statement today that unless NRA should be extended another two years there would be a general strike.

"We are today threatened," he said, "with a Nation-wide strike unless certain demands for legislation are complied with by Congress. If such tactics are effective we have ceased to be a Government founded on constitutional principles, but a Government controlled by fear."

He said also: "I have never failed in my public career to vote for equality of justice and to promote the proper interest of the laboring man."

Federal Judge William C. Coleman told the defendant today his stories "were too thin."

A New Producing Group Soon Will Join the Capital's Summer Theater Forces

Has Taken the National Park Odeon Theater

Theater in Ideal Setting; National Civic Project; Gossip of Theaters.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

A phone call from what seemed to be one of the less remote precincts of Montgomery County, Md., too late Tuesday night to be given attention in these columns yesterday, apprised this desk of an important development in the progress of the Capital's summer theater.

An organization composed of a managing directorate, actors, writers, directors and artisans of the playhouse soon are to enter the field of semiprofessional production with facilities of extraordinary completeness at their command.

It comes to my knowledge on authority that is deemed reliable that Dr. James E. Ament, president of National Park Seminary, one of the most fashionable girls' finishing schools in or near Washington, has expressed a willingness to lease the seminary's beautiful Greek theater, The Odeon, for the purpose of this new group's vacation period activities.

Perfect Summer Setting.

This would afford a setting for summer productions that no other so-called "barn" theater in this vicinity could boast. The Odeon is anything but a barn. It is, on the contrary, a beautiful, perfectly appointed and fully equipped theater, occupying a site of picturesque loveliness on the rolling grounds of the seminary, with their handsome landscaping and fine old trees. It is no more inaccessible than many of the locations that have been chosen for similar enterprises in past summer seasons.

It is my understanding that the policy of the newly formed company will be slightly different than is usually pursued by hot-weather companies of the usual stamp.

Only what are described as "discriminating plays" will be considered for production. They will be tastefully and thoughtfully produced and the conduct of the theater contemplates hostesses to receive the guests in the foyer, the serving of tea in the entr'actes and other touches of unique "service" calculated to appeal to the type of clientele it will be the company's aim to attract and hold as regular patrons.

"Under the Auspices Of."

The plays produced by this group will be presented, one is led to believe, "under the auspices of the National Civic Theater Society."

While I am not privileged to disclose names at this time, it is not violating any confidence to disclose that the managing directress is a woman of professional theater experience; that the director of the company is a former professional actor who was one of the prominent members of the cast of last summer's memorable run of "The Drunkard" on the Willard Roof; that a distinguished professional actor will have an important place in the acting ensemble and that one of the National Capital's most gifted young author-actor-director-producer-puppeteers also will be prominent in productional activities in more than one capacity.

Complete formal announcement of plans, one hears, will be made within a reasonably short time. In the meantime, this will do to mull over.

The Dawn Patrol.

It has finally been made plain why the press breakfast to Myrt and Marg, who begin a week's engagement as headliners of the vaudeville bill on the stage at Loew's Fox Theater today, was set at the unearthly hour of 9 o'clock this morning.

Myrt and Marg arrive in town at 7 and the matutinal spread which Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., planned for the Variety Club rooms in the Willard at 9, really will be their breakfast. They will go direct from the coffee-and-cakes business to the stage of the Fox for rehearsals and their first performance.

In private life, you will probably recall from their last visit, Myrt is Myrtle Vail, who won an enviable reputation first in musical comedy and then in vaudeville. Marge is her daughter, Dona Damerel, in private life the wife of Gene Kretsinger, of the C. B. S. harmony team of Gene and Charlie. Her father, Myrt's former husband, is George J. Damerel, who gained his greatest stage fame as the tenor of "The Merry Widow," for years the biggest musical comedy hit known to the American stage.

Writes Own Skits.

In addition to acting the part of Myrt in the radio serial wherein two imaginary chorus girls are hanged around from pillar to post and live a life full of adventure, comedy and romance, Myrt also writes all of the skits. It was in the fall of 1931 that she conceived the idea of this radio "routine." It caught on so emphatically that almost immediately it was made a feature of the coast-to-coast hookup of C. B. S.

And besides all that, they are a couple of grand people, genial, companionate and pleasant to know. Neither one has discovered as yet where "upstage" is or how to get there.

Frigid Air Item.

Unless it freezes over in the meantime, tomorrow is the day upon which the Crystal Pool out at Glen Echo Park will be thrown open for the summer. One of the most completely appointed natatoria in the country, Crystal Pool is one of the hot weather season's most popular play places. Its water always is kept clean and pure, the guards are college athletes with aquatic records to their credit and department is scrupulously supervised. Prices are reasonable and altogether, with no public bathing beaches in the city, Glen Echo supplies an indispensable need during the heated term, to coin another phrase.

A Veteran Passes.

It is Mr. James S. McFadden, former actor and lifelong lover of the theater and its people, who calls my attention to the fact that no mention has been made here of the recent death of Nellie McHenry, at the age of 82.

Nellie McHenry appeared for something like 20 years, off and on, in "A Night at the Circus," in which she was known from Maine to California, as the saying goes. Prior to, that, she had been leading woman with Booth and Barrett and had appeared in a large gallery of Shakespeare's best-known feminine characters.

It was the emergence of Lotta as a bit of a public idol that impelled many theretofore serious actresses to become gay and hoydenish soubrettes. None made the transition more successfully or with more personal glory than Nellie McHenry.

Her greatest popularity spanned the 1880s, '90s and 1900s, up to approximately 30 years ago, 1905.

Bows and genuflections, Mr. McFadden.

Local Boy Makes Good.

William Phillips, the former Washington youth, who has done so well with Eva Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Theater Company, will play here this summer as a member of the Roadside Theater Company. He is cast for an important part in "After Dark," with which the season will open on June 17 at the Rockville pike barn playhouse.

In "Alice in Wonderland," which played at the National season before last, young Phillips was one of the two students honored with major roles. He played the "Queen of Hearts"—originated by Joseph Schildkraut in the New York production—and "Tweedledum," not to mention the front legs of the White Knight's horse! He was cast as Peter in "Romeo and Juliet," presented during the same engagement.

Bill may not be recognizable to many of his friends here by reason of the fact that for the nonce he is a platinum blonde! For his last engagement in "Jackson White," he was called upon to play an albino. Hence the Gene Raymond color scheme.

Master Phillips gained his first enthusiasm for the stage as a member of the dramatic organizations of Western High School and George Washington University.

He will arrive in town this weekend, preparatory to beginning rehearsals with the Roadsiders on May 27.

Back to Films.

Constance Cummings, in private life Mrs. Benn W. Levy, wife of the British playwright who wrote the dialogue for "The Unfinished Symphony," now on the screen at the Belasco Theater, has been signed by Reliance Pictures to play the stellar role in "Amateur Girl," the screen play by Elmer Harris and Lynn Starling.

Robert Young is to be seen in the masculine lead, with Frances Drake and Lucille Watson prominently cast.

Miss Cummings, it will be recalled, has been appearing in the leading feminine role in the New York stage production of "Accent on Youth," the play with which the National Theater Players opened their season this year while it was still a hit on Broadway.

Record-Smasher.

Speaking of the National Theater Players, the current week, presenting Ethel Barrymore as guest star in W. Somerset Maugham's "The Constant Wife," is proving the biggest in 11 years of the company's operation consecutive springs and summers on E street. Wednesday's matinee performance, Wednesday night and last night were complete sell-outs. From the present outlook, there will not be a vacant chair in the National at any remaining performance during the week.

Vacation-Trouble Note.

It certainly is hard trying to get satisfactory steamship reservations to Europe this summer.

So I hear!

Beauties on Local Screens Today

The slightly haughty young woman above at the left is Helen Vinson, a thoroughly competent actress, who appears with Ralph Forbes, Paul Lukas, May Robson and others of note in "The Age of Indiscretion"—as what one is not?—on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater, beginning today. At right above is Grace Bradley, the calmly challenging siren, who appears importantly in support of George Raft and Ben Bernie in "Stolen Harmony," also opening today on the screen of the Warner Brothers' Earle. Either can be dynamite.

Somerset to End Work Relief Soon

Hundreds Get Employment Harvesting Crops.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., May 24.—Projects of the works relief division of the FERA in Somerset County will be ended effective the close of this month, E. B. Hodges, project director for the county, has announced.

This action was due to the increase in seasonal employment and the State-wide curtailment of relief funds, he said. Projects now underway, including the painting and repairing of the courthouse here, are being pushed with a view to completing them before the cessation of work.

Hodges said he believed the new Federal works-relief program would take care of the county's unemployed during the summer. The harvesting of large acreages of truck crops is giving work to hundreds of persons.

College Settles Police Trouble On Hitch Hike

Dr. Bowman Announces Understanding With Town Authorities.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 24.—Dr. Paul H. Bowman, president of Bridgewater College, said today that the so-called clash between the authorities of the town and college students on the hitch-hiking issue had been satisfactorily adjusted.

The clash resulted from the arrest of four men students of the college by the Bridgewater town sergeant for violation of the hitch-hiking ordinance. They were fined $1 each in trial justice court and at first refused to pay the fine and costs. The students were given ample time to pay, it was reported.

After the arrests, a delegation of the students appeared before the Bridgewater town council and asked that the hitch-hiking ordinance be repealed, or that a zone be established in which they could solicit rides. The town authorities took the matter under advisement.

Everything was quiet until one of the four students fined was taken into custody for failure to pay his fine. This led to a noisy demonstration by a group of students on the main street of Bridgewater in protest against the ordinance. There was no violence and the youth was released.

The college newspaper, however, published an editorial denouncing the hitch-hiking ordinance, but there was no further comment.

Dr. Brown today said that any change in the ordinance is a matter entirely in the hands of the town council.

In addressing the student body, Dr. Bowman declared:

"In the situation here it is not a question whether the hitch-hiking law is a good law or a bad one. All good citizens must obey the law, good or bad, until it is changed by the legal and orderly processes of our Government.

"It is unfortunate that we have a dual policy of enforcement of the hitch-hiking law in Virginia. In some sections no effort is made to enforce the law; in others students are given the impression that they will not be molested for violations; in other sections soliciting is permitted so long as a student remains on the sidewalk, which falls under the jurisdiction of the town, but is prohibited if standing on the highway, which is under State supervision, and vice versa.

"Our mayor and our town sergeant are both alumni of the college. There is no serious breach between our students and officials of the town. There were misunderstandings of minor character which, when aggravated, forced the issue upon the town and the college."

Fishermen Put Off Menhaden Season

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., May 24. — Although the menhaden fishing season in Virginia waters legally opens the last Monday in May, factorymen in Lancaster and Northumberland Counties met at Kilmarnock and decided not to begin fishing until June 17 this year.

There are 12 or more menhaden fishing plants in these two counties operating about 30 fishing steamers and employing about 1,500 men. The fish are caught in the Atlantic Ocean, Chesapeake Bay and tributaries, hauled to the local factories and converted into fish oil and scrap and by-products.

Danville Wins PWA Advance Of $2,750,000

Allotment Goes to Build Power Plant on the Dan River.

A loan and grant of $2,750,000 to Danville, Va., for a hydro-electric plant was announced yesterday by Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

This allotment was made out of the unobligated balance of the old public works appropriations and on the same terms as all other allotments made from those appropriations, a grant of 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials and the balance a loan at 4 per cent interest.

The new plant is to be built on the Dan River near Pinnacles, about 60 miles west of Danville. It will comprise two dams and a power house, with a transmission line running into Danville.

An allotment of $3,000,000 was made for this project on October 16, 1933, but was rescinded on March 7, 1934, after it had been defeated at an election. Since then plans for the project have been modified in some respects to permit construction at a lower cost.

Newsom, in Debut, Holds Chisox to 5 Hits as Nats Win, 10-0

Loop Leaders Dealt First Shutout

$50,000 Hurler Pounds Out 3 Blows, Starts Double Play.

Fills Bases Twice, but Tightens to Escape; Dykes Banished.

By Shirley L. Povich.

BUCK NEWSOM, Clark Griffith's $50,000 investment, paid immediate dividends yesterday. The man of many words was a pitcher of few base hits—five, to be exact—and his debut in a Washington uniform took the form of a 10-0 victory over the league-leading Chicago White Sox.

Newsom enjoyed a large afternoon before the Ladies' Day gathering of 10,000, after giving the crowd a pair of jittery innings in the first and third, when he loaded the bases full of White Sox. Among the items he accomplished were (1) the Nats' first shut-out victory of the season, (2) the first shut-out defeat of the season for the White Sox and (3) three hits off his own bat.

But down in the Nats' locker room after the game as he swabbed himself down in the shower while worshipful autograph seekers waited outside, Newsom bemoaned his failure as a prophet. Before the game he had said he would shut the White Sox out with three hits. He apologized for the other two.

"I lost count," he said. "I'd-a been bearing down in there if I'd a-known it."

Dykes Banished.

Newsom did everything yesterday but catch his own pitches. He started a fast double play with the bases full, he rifled a sharp single into right field, he laid a perfect bunt down the third base line and beat it out, and he looped a single into center that scored a run for the Nats in the ninth. He tipped his hat to the ladies and he was an accessory in the banishment of Manager Jimmy Dykes from the ball game.

Dykes was thumbed off the field by the hapless Jack Donnelly, second-base umpire, in the seventh inning when he protested that Newsom was out at second after he scampered back to the bag on Kuhel's line drive to Appling. As Newsom sat on the bag and smiled at the decision, Dykes, who had taken no part in the protests of the White Sox until that point, said something about the general disability of all umpires, and Donnelly motioned him to the showers.

Back in the fourth inning the luckless Donnelly had deprived the White Sox of a run when his hop, skip and jump failed to take him out of the path of Luke Sewell's stinging single through the box. The ball hit Donnelly on the calf and it was, indeed, the gold calf for the Nats, inasmuch as Appling, on second at the time, was limited to a one-base advance, and thus Newsom's shut-out aims were preserved.

The Nats got around to winning the ball game right off the bat, as it were. They launched a two-run assault on Les Tietje in the first inning and had him out of there by the fourth. After that, Vernon Kennedy shut them out—for one inning. In the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth they scored against Kennedy in clusters, varying from one to three, and Newsom coasted to the finish.

Back in the second inning it appeared as though Newsom would be forced to eat his words anent the shutout he would pitch against the Sox, when three straight walks filled the bases, with none out, and Clark Griffith's $50,000 seemed to have been grossly misspent.

But Newsom took a hitch in his

Reds Defeat Phils, 2-1, In Debut Under Lights

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, May 24.—Cincinnati's Reds took the first night game in major league baseball history tonight, defeating the Phillies, 2 to 1, behind the pitching of Paul Derringer.

The rival clubs inaugurated the new $50,000 lighting system at Crosley Field tonight with approximately more than 20,000 shivering fans in the stands.

A fanfare of fireworks preceded turning on of the lights, which flooded every corner of the field with illumination.

The Reds scored in the initial inning after the first three Phillies up went down before Derringer's pitching.

Myers, first man up for Cincinnati, doubled into left field, went to third on Riggs' grounder to Chiozza and came home when Goodman grounded to Camilli at first.

The Reds made their second run and thirty-fifth double play of the season in the fourth. The run came after one out. Sullivan singled, went to third on Pool's hot single through the box and scored as Chiozza threw out Campbell at first.

Philadelphia got its first run in the fifth. Todd opened with a single and took third on Haslin's single to center after Watkins popped out. Bowman then bounced to Myers, forcing Haslin, and Todd scored.

Byrd crashed into the center field wall making a spectacular catch of Camilli's long drive in the sixth. Spectators thought for a while he was injured, but he returned to the game after a rest.

Omaha Choice In Withers Today

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 24.—William Woodward's Omaha, galloping winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, will go after his third major victory of the year tomorrow when he opposes eight other 3-year-olds in the sixtieth running of The Withers mile at Belmont Park.

Although the stretch-running son of Gallant Fox is not supposed to be at his best at the distance, he is expected to go to the post the 7-to-10 choice to add to his prestige as the 3-year-old-champion and win the purse of close to $12,000.

Four of Omaha's opposition have yet to match strides with the champion, while the other four finished far back of his flying hoofs in either the Derby or the Preakness. At a mile, however, their owners and trainers are hoping to offer the Woodward colt a more serious argument.

Other Feature Races.

While Omaha and his rivals are clashing at Belmont Park, nearly 40 of the better grade of handicap horses will run for a pair of $5,000 purses at Rockingham and Washington Parks and in a $2,500 stake at Latonia.

The Rockingham feature, a one and one-sixteenth mile jaunt styled the New Hampshire Handicap, has attracted a field of 12, including Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Identify, winner of the Tobogган at Belmont and the Granite State Handicap at the Salem, N. H., course. With the lightly weighted Dogmata as a running mate, Identify is expected to rule a strong favorite to win his third straight race.

Twenty-one sprinters have been named for the six furlongs of the Chicago Handicap at Washington Park. The race promises to be a wide open betting affair.

Tribe Routs A's, 12-2; Vosmik Gets 5 Blows

Philadelphia, May 24 (AP).—Banging out 18 hits, including five by Left Fielder Vosmik, the Cleveland Indians battered the Athletics, 12 to 2, to win the series opener today.

Hal Trosky hit his sixth homer of the season with one on base in the sixth inning.

Pony classes will open the show tomorrow at 10 a. m., with events scheduled for through the day.

Navy, Harvard, Penn Crews Vie Today

President to See Events; Terps and Middies Clash on Track.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 24.—Topped by the Adams Cup rowing regatta, with the annual field and track meet with Maryland as the secondary feature, the spring athletic program of the Annapolis midshipmen will reach a semi-climax here tomorrow.

Varsity, junior varsity and freshmen eight-oared crews of Pennsylvania, Harvard and Naval will clash in the aquatic program, the varsity event being for the trophy cup offered by former Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, after whom the regatta is named.

All of the races will be over the same distance—1¾ miles. The first event between the three freshmen crews will be rowed at 3 o'clock. Half an hour later the Jayvee eights will be sent away, and following at a like interval the brush between the senior crews.

As a prelude to the regatta, former Secretary Adams will meet Midshipman David Sands Seaman, jr., of Providence, R. I., in a star boat race on the Severn tomorrow morning. Seaman, who won the Naval Academy interclass sailing competition, challenged Adams to the race.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt, whose son, Franklin jr., rows in the Harvard boat, will watch the regatta, and indications are that the throng of spectators will be greater than any that has witnessed an aquatic event here in years.

Navy and Maryland athletes are expected to furnish the usual tight clash in the field and track games. The meet will be epochal, in that for the first time in the history of varsity competition here the events will be held under the metric system that is destined to be standardized in leading colleges.

Other events on tomorrow's card are baseball with North Carolina; tennis with Georgetown; a lacrosse game between the Navy plebes and Johns Hopkins freshmen. Navy's 150-pound crew is in Philadelphia to compete in the Henley Regatta.

Gorski, of W. Md., West Point Choice

Andy Gorski, who ranked just a shade below Bill Shepherd in athletic prowess at Western Maryland College, has been appointed a candidate for West Point, The Post learned last night, and will take the examination for entrance with the plebe class of July 1.

One of the best ends ever developed by Dick Harlow at Western Maryland, Gorski also holds the 165-pound intercollegiate boxing championship and is proficient in other minor sports.

He was appointed by Representative Patrick Boland, of Scranton, Pa. Gorski will be graduated from Western Maryland June 3.

Gomez, of Yanks, Bows to Browns

Pepper Hits Homer With One On in 6-3 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—The last-place St. Louis Browns stepped out of their usual "doormat" role today and slapped the Yankees down into third place with a 6-to-3 victory in their first meeting of the season.

Lefty Gomez, whose parents watched him pitch big league ball for the first time, was the principal victim, taking his fifth defeat of the season. He was in trouble at first through wildness, but the Yanks gave him a lead going into the seventh. Then he passed Al Bejma, and Ray Pepper came through with a home run inside the park.

Hope Dimmed, Fans Attack Johnson

One Supporter Even Starts Chain Letter Protest to Officials.

CLEVELAND, May 24.—The rosy pre-season picture of an American League championship for this year's Cleveland Indians had turned a doubtful color tonight as fresh evidence appeared of serious dissension between Manager Walter Johnson and several of his players.

Johnson may have given the seven other teams cause for jubilation yesterday when he dismissed Catcher Glenn Myatt and Third Baseman Willie Kamm, but he certainly stunned Cleveland fans, who considered them two of the Tribe's greatest assets.

President Alva Bradley of the Indians said tonight Kamm may be retained by the club in some other capacity than that of a player.

"Kamm has been of great service to the Indians," Bradley said. "Personally, I would like to see him retained in some other capacity."

When Bradley was asked what other positions he had in mind, he answered, "it is possible we may be able to place him in the minor leagues, where we have connections, in some executive capacity."

Myatt had nine victories and only one defeat in the games he had caught for the Indians this year. He was removed from the line-up, however, on May 9 because he was an ineffective batter against southpaw pitching. Since then the Tribe has won only four of 11 contests.

Aided in Two Victories.

Kamm, another veteran, got into the line-up for the first time this year only a few days ago, but was largely responsible for two of the last four victories.

In giving Myatt an unconditional release and ordering Kamm to report to President Alva Bradley, to determine the third baseman's future status, Johnson accused them of interfering with his managing of the team.

"Myatt's habit, while sitting on the bench, was to criticize. Both of them did a lot of talking to players on other clubs and to some of our own men. It was a case of second-guessing on their part, something not allowed by any club manager," Johnson said.

Cleveland fans, however, were generally unconvinced. Some of them know Myatt as one of the least talkative players on the team. As for Kamm, he was known as a veteran who liked to be helpful to younger players who sought his advice.

A year ago Johnson had trouble with Pitcher Oral Hildebrand and ordered him suspended.

At that time there was a city-wide cry for dismissal of the manager on the charge that, despite his own great pitching record, the "Big Train" was not a competent handler of other hurlers. Bradley quickly stilled the tumult, however, by hiring Johnson for the 1935 season.

Bradley again signified today he would back Johnson's judgment to the limit. "In any business we run we have only one manager," he said. "Walter acted for the good of the club."

But the uproar continued among the Indians' fans. Hundreds telephoned protests to the sports editors of Cleveland newspapers. One even started a chain-letter protest, deploring the action against Kamm and Myatt.

Little Faces Tweddell For British Links Title

By the Associated Press.

ST. ANNES-ON-THE-SEA, England, May 24.—Striding down England's fairways like a Titan bludgeoning his opponents into submission with methodical ease, 24-year-old William Lawson Little, jr., of San Francisco, today moved within a single step of his second straight British amateur golf title and his third consecutive national crown.

Standing in the path of the all-conquering American, who will be striving to emulate the "doubles" scored in 1886 and 1887 by H. G. Hutchinson and in 1900 and 1901 by Harold H. Hilton, both Britons and the only players in the history of the championship to turn the trick, was Dr. William Tweddell, a stocky, pleasant, 38-year-old Englishman.

Dr. Tweddell, who captained the British Walker Cup team which made an unsuccessful invasion of the United States in 1928, won the British championship eight years ago at Hoylake when the field was not freighted with the great Bob Jones or other American contenders. In the opinion of speculators, who are offering 3 to 1 against his chances, Dr. Tweddell is a lamb being tossed to a lion in tomorrow's 36-hole championship round.

Victims Give Praise.

Perhaps the most impressive tribute to the American siege gun's ability was voiced by a pair of shotmakers who felt his thunderbolts today, George L. Q. Henriques, the 42-year-old London stock broker, and Robert Sweeney, jr., the former New Yorker who has lived in England many years. Neither felt particularly bad about losing to the champion.

Henriques, who had eliminated men like Leonard Crawley, Leslie Garnett and Dan R. Topping in previous rounds, collapsed like a punctured balloon after seeing Little belt a couple of drives and long irons the gale-swept outward nine, which parallels the railroad tracks near by the sea.

"He's terrific, I tell you, simply terrific!" roared Henriques as Little closed out against him on the fourteenth green, 6 and 4, after playing the last five holes in 2 under fours.

Against the Briton Little made only two mistakes in going out in

Grove Allows 14 Hits, but Wins, 8-4

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 24.—The Boston Red Sox evened their current series with Mickey Cochrane's Detroit Tigers today, pounding out an 8-4 victory behind the rather shaky pitching of Bob "Lefty" Grove.

While the Tigers garnered 14 hits off Grove, he was able to bear down in the pinches to hold the visitors to one run in the first inning, and three in the ninth.

"General" Alvin Crowder held the Red Sox in check until the fifth inning, when he was greeted by a barrage of extra-base hits, including a double by "Babe" Dahlgren, a home run over the left-field wall by Moe Berg, and a double by Grove, which accounted for three of Boston's runs.

Yoder Turns Back Webb For Title

Wins at Manor, 2 and 1, After Checking Foe's Last-Nine Rally.

Pitt and Miller Beaten in Semifinals Bids in Morning.

By Dave Herman.

LEVI YODER, a slim, black-haired 25-year-old golfer who learned the game 10 years ago in the little hamlet of Linville, N. C., won his first championship yesterday when he defeated Tommy Webb, jr., of Washington Golf and Country Club, 2 and 1, in the final of the Manor Club invitation tournament.

Yoder, entry from Indian Spring Country Club, shot the 17 holes in 3 over par, after beating off a desperate last nine challenge by the 195-pound former University of Maryland football star.

Championship golf was displayed by Yoder on the outgoing side. Flourishing a putter that was equipped with magic, and swinging a driver and iron that sent virtually every shot true to its objective, the Indian Spring golfer captured the first three holes, picked up a trio of birdies, clipped one stroke off par with a dazzling 34, and went 5 up on his adversary at the turn.

Misses Two-Footers.

Yoder lost his putting charm and his delicate touch for approaches the early part of the incoming nine, missed two-footers on the tenth and eleventh to lose to par golf, took fives on the thirteenth and fourteenth for additional losses, and went to the fifteenth leading only one up.

Webb appeared to be headed for better things, after making this game comeback, but the 485-yard fifteenth proved his undoing. Here both were down the fairway nicely with their drives. Tommy's second shot caught a large bunker 75 yards from the green and Yoder knocked his second to within 20 yards of the carpet. Webb blasted out safely, overshot the pin with his fourth, missed his putt coming back, and lost the hole to Yoder, who anchored his approach 2 feet from the pin for a birdie four.

Short With Tee Shots.

They halved the sixteenth in fours. On the seventeenth, a 239-yard par three, both were short with their tee shots. Webb was 10 feet past the pin on his approach and Yoder 8 feet short of the cup. Yoder's approach putt caused a partial stymie. Webb's putt to win the hole missed the cup by inches, and the battle ended.

Yoder finished with a 73 and Webb with a 76.

Just how well the transplanted Carolinian putted is best evidenced by the fact that he took only 11 putts on the first nine and 16 on the second—27 in all.

He ran down a 12-footer for a four and win on the first, a 40-footer for a deuce on the second. On the fifth, he lost his ball, took a penalty stroke (Webb out of bounds also had a penalty stroke), and knocked in a six-footer for a five. On the sixth he rammed home a 25-footer for a birdie three to go four-up, and on the 471-yard ninth he sank a 25-footer for a birdie four.

In the morning semifinals, Yoder eliminated Defending Champion Harry Pitt, 2 and 1, picking up two birdies and winning four of the last

C. V. Whitney's The Darb, 3-2 Choice, Victor at Rockingham

Two-Length Triumph Is Recorded

Time for ¾-Mile Best of Meeting; Stocks Runs Second.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKINGHAM RACE TRACK, Salem, N. H., May 24.—C. V. Whitney's The Darb, a 3-2 favorite, showed his class and heels to five others in the Manchester Claiming Handicap today at Rockingham Park in the feature race.

The five-year-old horse, with the gifted Alfred Robertson up, judged his pace well, made his move at the head of the stretch and won easily by two lengths over Golden Fate. Stocks, closing with a rush after a slow, faltering start, won the show position.

The Darb traveled the six furlongs in 1:12, the fastest three-quarters of a mile any thoroughbred has run since the meeting opened.

The victory pushed Robertson into a tie with Freddie Faust for the honor of being the leading jockey of the meeting. Each has piloted eight winners home in the nine days of the meeting.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOHN TIO, $21.20, $6.60, $4.50; LIGHT WEIGHT, $3.90, $3.00; CABLEGRAM, $6.50.

JOHN TIO, quick to begin and displaying good speed, was steadied along when outrun by LIGHT WEIGHT. Fisher bided his time on the inside and JOHN TIO, closing stoutly, was up in the last stride to wear down LIGHT WEIGHT. The latter, pushed into contention, drew clear after leaving the back stretch, but weakened in the closing strides. CABLEGRAM was prominent all the way. ABSCONDER worked his way up steadily and finished going stoutly.

SECOND RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:48. Off at 3:02½. Winner, H. Neusteter's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MASKED GAL, $8.90, $4.00, $2.90; BROWBEATEN, $7.90, $4.40; CASH BOOK, $3.70.

MASKED GAL, away in the first flight, worked her way to the leaders gradually, was brought to the outside on the stretch and, wearing down BROWBEATEN, outlasted her to the end. BROWBEATEN, in close pursuit of the leader, wore the latter down for the command, fought it out courageously, but was unable to stave off the winner. CASH BOOK, unable to keep pace early, closed strong through the stretch. INA DEAR, a rapid beginner, opened up a good lead, but faltered through the last three-sixteenths. MISS GINBAR was never a factor. FLO X went evenly.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:39. Winner, Mrs. N. Ray's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TWENTY KARAT, $55.40, $17.70, $7.70; CRACK FLYER, $3.90, $3.30; JESSIE D. M., $4.40.

TWENTY KARAT, off from the pace, moved up on the outside of the pacemaker, assumed a slight lead reaching the stretch, and came up gradually through the last furlong. CRACK FLYER, quickest to begin was hard hustled all the way and, though continuing stoutly, was unable to keep pace in the drive. HIGH TORQUE moved wide on the outside, but bore in nearing the sixteenth pole, for which he was disqualified. JESSIE D. M. had good speed, but faltered.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:12½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLOWERY LADY, $10.20, $3.80, $3.00; JUDGE SCHILLING, $2.90; MEROVECH, $3.10.

FLOWERY LADY worked her way into contention gradually after reaching the initial quarter-mile, swung to the outside at the stretch turn, ran down the leaders inside the last furlong, and drew out steadily. JUDGE SCHILLING alternated in forcing the pace, but found his limpost too great and was unable to keep pace in the drive. MEROVECH displayed good speed and was much used racing with JUDGE SCHILLING. ENERGETIC BOY saved ground in the stretch, but was unable to reach the leaders under punishment.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:45½. Winner, O. S. Weiss' br. m. MOANE KEALA followed within striking distance of RED BADGE while the latter was establishing the running, came to the outside of the leader in the stretch and, hard ridden, moved up in the closing strides. RED BADGE had speed from the start and fought it out courageously to the end. BELLE GRIER moved up on the outside and closed nicely in same fashion.

THE DARB, permitted to settle into his best stride and under slight restraint for first mile, swung to the outside in the stretch, wore down the leaders when reaching the stretch, and drew out steadily through the closing furlong. GOLDEN FATE dropped back after rounding the far turn, came through on the inside entering the stretch and closed gamely. STOCKS, outrun early, came with a rush on the inside.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:48. Off at 5:50. HAPPY FLAG, under steadying restraint for the first five furlongs, moved up fast leaving the back stretch, fought it out gamely with SUN ERIN through the stretch and outlasted him at the end. SUN ERIN drew clear in the run up the first turn, was steadied along in front, and fought it out gamely with the winner. JACK CHEVIGNY forced the pace for the first half-mile and held on well. PLAYMORE was well placed. The others were far back all the way.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:19. Off at once. Winner, G. L. IDLE ALONG, steadied along in back of the pace for the first half-mile, wore SALUT D'AMOUR down for the command and, holding on gamely through the stretch, held FLYING DERE safe. The latter, under reserve until leaving back stretch, moved up gamely, made a bold bid to reach the leader, but was not good enough. OLD JUDGE worked his way up gradually in last three furlongs and gained clear sailing on the inside through the stretch. SALUT D'AMOUR displayed good speed. BIG SHOW never could get within striking distance of the leaders. BRIGHT BIRD tired badly.

Dear Al: Rockingham Race Track, May 24.

The tout's big objective is to get what he calls "his man." The tout makes his way by finding some one else to bet his money for him. Of course, it is profitable when the tout is lucky enough to pick winners. It is a fact that a prominent Washington business man went to Havre de Grace. He had been warned repeatedly about staying away from strangers with tips. He was given a mental picture of all the pits and falls awaiting those who listen to "sharks" around the track. On the way out, he reasoned that if the tout could make money on his betting, he would make money, too. So, strange as it seems, this man set out to find a tout. He was successful—and, what's more, he had a big day. The tout took about 25 per cent of his winnings, but the business man was satisfied. This is a rare case. Had the business man been here today, he could have done better with a tout than he could have with Bill Bennings. It was one of those days when everything goes wrong. My horses looked good, broke well and were nice prices, but they did not win.

BILL.

First race—I'll give Shyno another chance to make good here. This is a promising youngster and packs a lot of speed. The Greentree entry of Torita and Jamboree seems to have at least one of the money positions in hand. Zowie for the show.

Second race—Bride Elect gets in this with only steadying weight and Watson has been assigned the mount. I see no reason for mistakes. Profitable and Fast Move for the other awards.

Third race—Rough Party doesn't prefer a race as short as this, but will be there with that closing rush that I believe will earn a set of brackets. Gets in light. Glyndon Belle won her last and is dangerous. Paradum can better that recent effort.

Fourth race—Zembla would like more of a route than this mile and a sixteenth, but is in excellent shape and may be a price here. Flat Rock has improved. Mynah to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Identify deserves the top ranking here. Has won stakes the last two trips to the post, carries the luck of the Vanderbilt stable and has been assigned capable riding in the form of Les Fallon. Teralice, in with only 102 pounds, should be close off that last effort. Lynx Eye for the show.

Sixth race—Balios and Speedmore should battle it out for the main money here. Taunton has worked well and has an outside chance of scoring an upset.

Seventh race—Midshipman should like the conditions here and I expect him to score. Grainger's last was a bang-up second and he will have to be watched. Primute to lead the others to the wire.

Eighth race—Ogle should win a race of this sort and I have picked tomorrow as the day. The light weight assignment should help. Raycart finally won last out and will be close. Winged Flight to show.

Sullivan Bests Baroni, 2-0, as Eastern Wins Inter-High Title

Ninth Crown In 11 Years Annexed

Guyon Slabman Allows 7 Blows and Rival 4; Hits Home Run.

By John R. Vosburgh.

ANOTHER Eastern High team welded together by the gnarled hand of gray-haired Charlie Guyon, won the interhigh baseball championship yesterday. As Lefty Joe Sullivan, Eastern's great southpaw, fanned the last three Roosevelt men to face him at Eastern Stadium, thereby winning a brilliant 2-to-0 shutout from Frankie Baroni, the Ruff Riders' ace right-hander, it marked the ninth time in the last 11 years that a Guyon team has swept through to the title.

It was every bit as great a mound duel as had been anticipated. With two of the finest pitchers in interhigh history matching their talent against a couple of hard-hitting teams, the championship literally revolved around every pitch. It was on one of these pitches, Baroni's in particular, that Lefty Joe himself sent the Roosevelt title revolving out of the park.

Sullivan Hits Homer.

For the only earned run of the game, Sullivan stepped into one of the stocky Roosevelt boy's fast ones in the second inning and rapped it far over the head of Center Fielder Francis Coakley for a home run. Eastern had already scored in the first, but in unearned fashion, when Herb Bartoo drew a walk and Joe Crisaful was given a fluky triple when his rap over third base rolled under the projecting left-field bleachers.

With the exception of Sullivan's homer, the pitching honors were evenly divided between Frankie the barrel and Lefty the lanky. The rotund husky with the bristly hair allowed Eastern only four hits all told, while he and his team mates were rapping Sullivan for seven. In addition, he fanned ten Easterners, but the Eastern southpaw won their strike-out duel, fanning 12 to Baroni's 10. Sullivan walked one man and Baroni three.

While Sullivan proved his greatness by cool, effective pitching in the pinches, Roosevelt killed at least three chances to score by pathetically poor base-running and some poor generalship.

In the third inning, Catcher Joe Bovello, who, with Baroni, accounted for two hits apiece, got on on a bad throw by Al Kidwell, Eastern shortstop. Baroni slashed a Texas leaguer between second and short. George Coakley advanced the runners on an unintentional sacrifice to the pitcher, and the stage was set for two Roosevelt runs. Then the Roosevelt strategy called for a bunt from Francis Coakley and Coakley's short roller to Sullivan caught Bovello off third by several feet. Sullivan then ended the threat by fanning Frank Bailey.

In the sixth, Francis Coakley started the inning by drawing a walk. The Roosevelt strategy called on Coakley to steal second, and he was out when he overran the base. Jack Neely's subsequent single was more or less wasted energy, especially in view of the next play, when Ey flied out to left.

Another Roosevelt rally in the seventh was futile, coming as it did after Sherwood Robertson had fanned for the third time and Thompson had grounded out. Bovello and Baroni each singled, but George Coakley ended the threat by grounding out. Neely's double to right in the eighth was without result, coming with two out and sandwiched between strike-outs by Bailey and Ey. Pinch Hitters Silverman and Downing fanned in the ninth, and Bovello, who had already contributed his share of the attack, was the final victim.

The victory gave Eastern its second straight Clark Griffith Trophy and marked Sullivan's seventh straight inter-high victory.

Ross' Feet, Ankles Insured; Companies Turn Down Hands

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 24.—It was after the dinner hour at Barney Ross' cottage at Grossinger's, at Ferndale, N. Y., and we were all sitting around for a fanning bee. It was a curiously assorted group. There was Barney Ross, the fighter. There were his two managers, Swart Sam Pian and Chubby Art Winch. There was his brother, Benny, now in the jewelry business, and Izzie, his trainer. There was a famous band leader, Abe Lyman, and a red-headed hoofer, Paul Draper, and a doctor by the name of Connolly. There was also present this eavesdropping typewriter.

What does a gathering like that talk about of a cool evening in the mountains after the day's work is done, the training gloves locked away, and the day's copy filed? Well, as near as I can remember, it went something like this: The first thing we do is turn the radio on full blast because Ben Bernie is broadcasting, and Ross likes him. Then nobody listens to him but everybody who talks has to yell to be heard over the radio.

Somehow the talk gets around to insurance and I learn some interesting things. The hoofer has his feet and ankles insured because they are his bread and butter, but Barney Ross can not get his hands insured even though they ars HIS bread and butter. Not even Lloyd's will issue a policy on these important tools, and if they did, the premium would be prohibitive.

If Barney Ross, at the age of 25, wanted a life insurance policy, he would, as a prize fighter, be rated 20 years additional, or in other words, would have to pay the premium of a 45-year-old man. He could get a 10 or 15 year endowment policy, but not a 20-year one. A $10,000 policy would cost him $7,448 annually. If he or his managers wished to insure their diamond rings they would be refused insurance.

The insurance companies, in their refusal of fighters, trainers, seconds and managers as insurable risks, would very nicely label the prize-fight industry as a whole. There is no question of the integrity of the individual. It is simply that fighters and managers consort with questionable characters. 'Such as," suggested Brother Benny, looking up from a game of "klabiasch," a two-handed card game, "newspaper reporters, gunmen, promoters——"

Barney's mother, Mrs. Razoffsky, comes to New York for all his fights. She is nearly 60 years old. She comes by train, but on the return trip she hopes that Barney will decide to go by airplane. She likes to fly in airplanes, but won't unless Barney is with her. Barney didn't know where in Russia his mother was born. Neither did Benny. Benny was six years old when the Razoffskys came to America. All he remembers is that he went to work the day they got off the boat. On a pushcart!

There is silence for a moment, that is to say, the blaring of Bernie's Band, and the two klabiasch players yelling—"Yes—! No—! Schmeiss!" Then we get on the subject of net incomes. Fighters, unless they are heavyweight champions, rarely make large incomes. If Ross were to gross $100,000 he would be lucky to bank $30,000 net. By the time he had paid his managers, the income taxes, training expenses, traveling expenses and taken care of touches from friends and relatives he would be lucky to have that.

Braves' Homer, 3 On, Futile; Bucs Win, 7-6

Pittsburgh, May 24 (AP).—A long homer by Rupert Thompson, of the Braves, with the bases loaded in the ninth, sent four runs across the plate, but the Pirates, with an early lead, weathered the storm and came through victors, 7 to 6. Paul Waner's one-hand catch of Babe Ruth's 400-foot drive was another high light of an otherwise listless game.

Allegany High Beaten First Time in 3 Years

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 24.—Allegany High School's baseball team was defeated for the first time in three years when Everett (Pa.) High School gained a 3-to-1 decision, thereby snapping a 20-game winning streak.

Foor, ace twirler of the Bedford Countians, outpitched Carl "Sparky" Sterne, lanky right-hander of A. H. S., to snap an eight-game winning spurt of the 1935 Allegany team. Foor held the Allegany boys to three hits—all singles—and struck out 10 men.

Clear Knight Hagerstown Winner

Gelding Takes Second in Row; O'Malley Pilots Pair of Victors.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 24.—The horse, Clear Knight, winner of last Tuesday's opening-day feature at this track, came back today with another rousing effort that made it two in a row. Man and nature succeeded in changing conditions of the race, but the result proved the same.

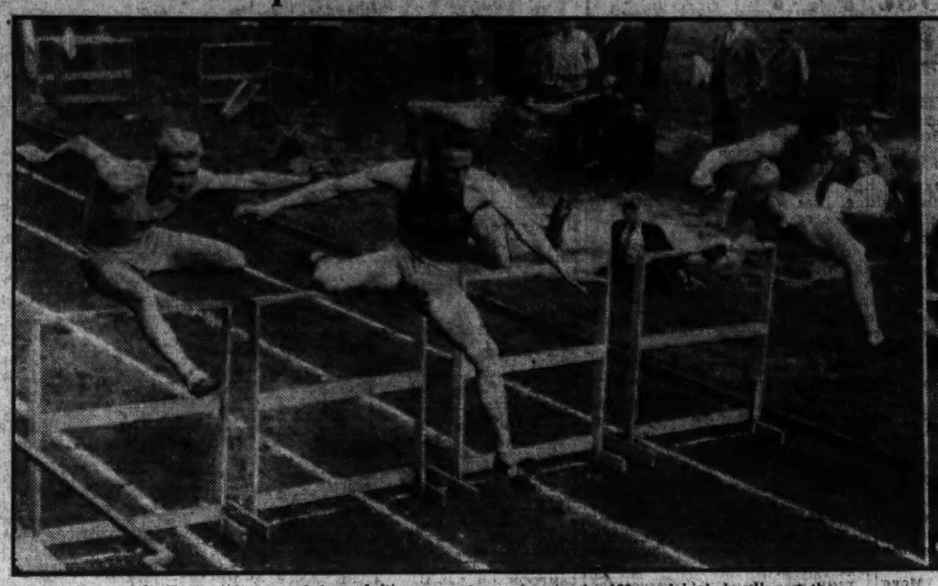
In his first appearance here, Clear Knight carried 114 pounds, was ridden by the veteran, Jockey Charlie Jackson, and ran over a muddy track. Today, Clear Knight carried 118 pounds, was ridden by the youthful Jockey Mike Verbus and ran over a fast track. The distance was the same, wherein lies the secret of Clear Knight's success. Those in charge of the horse did make good on one score. The shift in riders brought a $5.20 mutuel today, in contrast to last Tuesday's pay-off of only $3.90. However, Clear Knight won by five lengths on each occasion.

6,500 See Program.

Perfect racing weather greeted the crowd of 6,500, the majority of which participated in the sport of "daily doubling." The winning combination today was that of Soupcon in the first race and Lampoon in the third. The pay-off was a mere $19.30.

Clear Knight, owned by Harry Foote, ran his usual front-running race. Verbus got the big son of Bright Knight away winging, and he just galloped to the finish line. Crossing Over, one of the chief chasers in the early stages, closed some ground to take the second money from Morocen.

Joe O'Malley, making his saddle debut here, rode a pair of nice races, scoring with Wild Blonde in the second and Helen Bab in the sixth. As is the case often at this course, these horses broke on top and stayed there.



Monroe Emmerich, Tech star (second from left), romps home first in the 120-yard high hurdles at the interhigh track meet at Central Stadium yesterday. Gault Nichols, Western (left), was third; Pete Wall, Tech (second from right), fourth, and Logan Well, Western (right), second.

Post Staff Photos.

Eddie Miller, Eastern ace, goes over for a new record of 6 feet ⅞ inch in the high jump. Tech won the thirty-eighth annual meet with a total of 96 points, far ahead of Eastern's second-place 57 total.

Tech High Captures Track Meet Easily

By George Considine.

AS PREDICTED on all sides, Tech yesterday romped to an easy victory in the thirty-eighth annual inter-high school track and field meet, held under leaden skies at Central Stadium.

Outdoing even the fondest hopes of Coach Hap Hardell, Tech's Nurmis and Paddocks managed to amass a total of 96 points. Eastern placed second with 57 and Western took the show honors by accumulating 37½ points. Roosevelt and Central brought up the rear, bagging 9 and 4½ tallies, respectively.

All records but one remained intact with the close of activities. Eddie Miller, lanky Eastern basket ball star, accounted for that when he leaped 6 feet ⅞ inch to a new all-time high jump mark. The old record was established in 1928 by Calvin Milan, of Central.

Individual scoring honors went to galloping George Bogan, Tech's ace cinder scorer, who streaked home first in both the 100 and 220 yard dashes. And just to prove that he has the old school spirit, George finished off a spectacular day by leading his team to victory in the mile relay.

This year's meet was marked with a new system of scoring, which Coach Hardell humorously described as another "share-the-wealth" plan. Under the new order first place gets five points, second place four points, third place three, and so on.

Handsomely cast medals of gold, silver and bronze were awarded the first, second and third men in each event.

Giants Down Cubs With 20 Hits, 13-0

Schumacher Is Effective; Grants Four Blows.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 24.—The Giants finally found a left-hander they could beat today and, with Hal Schumacher pitching a four-hit shutout, they celebrated the occasion by bowling over the Cubs, 13 to 0.

Little Roy Henshaw was the victim, and the crippled league leaders, who apparently are out to prove they can limp faster than the rest of the teams can run, knocked him out with a five-run blast in the first inning. They continued their belting against a pair of young right-handers, Clay Bryant and Hugh Casey, for a total of 20 hits. Their success against Henshaw brought their first victory over a southpaw this season.

Bulls at Helm But Gains Are Few and Small

Prime Stocks Advance, but Motors Decline on Profit Taking.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—The Wall street bull party was still in charge today, but it appeared to be content to progress more slowly.

New groups were brought forward, including the recently neglected rails and a few utilities, while some of the late favorites among the industrials, especially the motor section, suffered from profit taking.

Upward price changes, however, were in nearly all cases fractional, except for several of the higher-priced issues, while some of the declines ran to a point or a little more as in Chrysler, International Harvester and National Biscuit.

The varied hopes and fears engendered by the bonus agitation appeared to have been set aside for the time being. Washington was watched for the forthcoming Presidential message to Congress on the railroads. Expectations that this might contain some constructive suggestions for the carriers helped to bring that group into favorable notice.

Stock market activity held up fairly well at 1,179,280 shares. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks was unchanged at 42.3, with small advances in the rails and utilities counteracted by a fractional recession in the industrials.

Slump in Corn Tumbles Grain

Break of 3¾ Cents Drops Wheat, Oats and Provisions.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 24.—Acute weakness developed in the corn market today, and prices broke 3¾ cents a bushel, almost the extreme limit possible for any 24-hour period.

Month-end liquidating sales of May corn holdings, together with notably auspicious wheat crop prospects, as well as silencing of inflation talk, led to a pronounced increase of bearish sentiment. Favorable weather for corn planting tended also to tumble values down, carrying May wheat and all deliveries of oats to below the season's previous bottom price record.

Corn closed nervous, 2 cents to 3¼ cents under yesterday's finish; July, 79¾@79¾; wheat, 1⅛@1⅛ down; July, 88½@88⅝; oats, ⅝@2 cents off, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 17 cents.

Likelihood of further liberal shipments of corn to Chicago by lake vessels from Georgian Bay, Canada, did much to unsettle the corn market, and so, too, did heavy clearances of corn from Argentina to the United States. Provisions ruled irregular, with some selling influenced by weakness of grains, but hog prices were higher.

Anomalous Price Rise in Germany and Italy, Despite Stable Currencies, Reflects Military and Recovery Expenditures, Restricted on Foreign Trade and Exchange

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 24.—One anomalous recent development has been the tendency of commodity prices to rise in countries like Germany and Italy, whose currencies have remained relatively stable in the free foreign exchange markets, while prices in other countries with depreciated currencies have been soft or declining.

The official German wholesale price index, with 1913 equal to 100, stood at 101 in April, as compared with 96 a year before. Bachi's index of wholesale prices in Italy, based on 1913 as 100, reached 288 in March, which represented a rise of almost 7 per cent since last summer. Cable reports indicate Italian prices have risen considerably more since. During this same period, commodity prices in the gold bloc countries have declined substantially, while prices in the sterling area have moved somewhat lower. Obviously, higher prices in countries like Germany and Italy do not reflect monetary factors, therefore.

The principal cause of higher prices in Italy and Germany has been an increased demand for commodities because of greater domestic business activity. More active business in turn has been attributable to public works and other recovery measures, as well as to the increased military preparations in these countries.

Clearing Agreements Raise Prices at Home.

A second important factor, particularly in Germany, has been the clearing and compensation agreements concluded with other countries, to facilitate foreign trade and debt payments in the face of unsettled foreign exchange conditions. Through such agreements, merchandise exchanged with other countries is not paid for in the ordinary course through the foreign exchange markets. Instead, imports and exports are offset against each other through the central banks or special government clearing offices established by the countries concerned. On the other hand, imports from countries with which no clearing or compensation arrangements have been made must be paid for with foreign exchange, which is available only in limited quantities and subject to rigid restrictions.

Importers in these countries thus are strongly tempted to limit their foreign purchases to those nations with whom their own country has a clearing arrangement, even though this means paying higher prices. In fact, so eager have importers been to avoid foreign exchange restrictions by using these clearing agreements, that Austrian grain merchants are reported in some instances to have found it more advantageous to purchase Hungarian wheat in Italy than in Hungary, despite much lower prices quoted in the country of origin. The reason for this was that the Austro-Italian clearing arrangement made it possible to buy in Italy freely without the uncertainty and trouble created by foreign exchange restrictions.

Clearing arrangements thus raise prices in countries subject to foreign exchange restrictions, by diverting buying of many things to higher priced markets. Needless to say, the United States has been injured by such diversion, since we have no clearing arrangements, and are not in position to obtain them because our trade balance with Europe is so largely in our favor.

Not Sensitive to Lower Prices Abroad.

A third factor advancing prices in these countries are the import and foreign exchange restrictions themselves, which make these countries less sensitive to prices abroad. Imports of a variety of commodities have now been checked entirely or greatly reduced in these countries, as part of the effort to force a balance in their trade to protect the currencies. While the government has intervened to prevent sharp price rises to some extent, such intervention has not been fully effective when a real shortage of certain commodities develops. As time passes and previously imported stocks are consumed, the tendency for short supplies to bring about price advances increases.

The price advances that have occurred in these countries because of government public works and military expenditures, and because of the restrictions on imports, reflect the tendency for their average standard of living to decline. As a larger proportion of national production is diverted to public works and armaments, and as imports are largely curtailed to a limited group of products regarded by the government to be most necessary for the national interest, the supply of ordinary consumption goods is reduced. This brings rising prices, while average incomes of wage and salary earners remain unchanged or decline.

Match Companies Reach Agreement

New York, May 24.—In a joint statement issued today by American and Swedish bankers representing the International Match Corporation and the Swedish Match Co., it was announced that "an accord has been reached in principle on all or nearly all substantial matters of common concern to the two interests and that the legal advisers are now engaged in drafting papers."

It was pointed out that while the International Match Corporation, under the agreement, will receive $8,500,000 cash and 900,000 shares of Swedish Match Co. "B" stock, from the latter company in exchange for the transfer of certain properties, the amount received through this operation will not constitute the only assets of the International Match Corporation, as the latter has considerable other assets in its treasury from which substantial returns are expected eventually.

Cotton Crop in 1934 42.5% Below Normal

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics said yesterday that the 1934 cotton crop was 42.56 per cent below normal production for the acreage planted and that 20.7 per cent of the cut was due to drought. This compared with 6.8 per cent due to dry weather in 1933; 8 per cent in 1932 and 8.3 per cent in 1931. Most of the remainder of the reduction in yield was accounted for by excessive moisture, "other climatic causes," and boll-weevil damage. The bureau's revised estimates placed the 1934 crop at 9,636,000 bales, compared with 13,047,000 in 1933.

Frisco Deficit Jumps in Year To $31,653,677

Losses of Railroad and Subsidiaries in 1934 Were $10,307,725.

New York, May 24.—The profit and loss deficit of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway increased $13,709,822 from $17,944,835 to $31,653,677 in 1934, the report for that year discloses. A $3,129,706 charge for retired road and equipment bonds and the $10,307,725 loss suffered in 1934 were the chief items accounting for the increase in the deficit. The loss in 1933 was $10,261,449.

For the first time, the report contains a page of explanation concerning the balance sheet. It is noted that $196,840 included in unadjusted debits represents the balance of a $400,000 sum held by the managers who unsuccessfully attempted to effect a plan of reorganization for the company some years ago.

Current assets were $10,952,589 and current liabilities $56,923,447 on December 31, against $12,664,447 and $39,274,474, respectively, a year previously. Cash was $2,865,020, against $6,116,605. Total assets were $464,685,107, against $468,390,553.

Oil Stocks Decrease, Consumption Gains

Stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum at the close of the week ended May 18 totaled 324,006,000 barrels, according to data compiled by the Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior, for Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes. Compared with data for the previous week, this total represents a net decline of 673,000 barrels, comprising a decrease of 728,000 barrels in stocks of domestic crude petroleum and a gain of 53,000 barrels in stocks of foreign crude.

Current reports of the industry for the week ended May 18, in comparison with those for the previous week, indicate further increases in both production and consumption of crude petroleum. Daily average crude oil production was about 2,685,000 barrels, compared with an average of about 2,650,000 barrels for the previous week.

London—Irregularity developed on the stock exchange today due to operators reducing commitments over the week-end. Gilt-edged securities declined on selling orders owing to prospects of a flotation of new competitive issues. Gold-mining shares eased on Paris offerings, while oil and industrial issues were the firmest sections. The market closed easy.

Paris—Political and financial uncertainties left trading irregular on the bourse today with French industrials and rentes generally drifting downward. International issues were firm, although Belgians declined with French issues. The sluggish trading at the close caused 4½ per cent rentes to lose 1 franc 20 centimes, 4 per cent 1918 issues 65 centimes, 4 per cent 1917 40 centimes, while 3 per cents gained 45 centimes.

Berlin—Prices were firm at the opening on the boerse today, but dullness developed later and the closing was weak.

Profit Taking Nips Spirited Rally in Bonds

All Groups Are Higher in Early Trading; Rails Strong.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—The bond market stepped out with a lively show of strength early today, but became a bit timid when profit-taking appeared and gave up some of its gains. United States Governments followed a similar course.

Freed of bonus uncertainties for the first time in several weeks, all types of bonds were in broad demand at the start and made good progress when the upturn was halted by profit-taking. The main body of bonds ended under the day's high.

Transfers aggregated $11,663,000, par value, compared with $8,181,000 on Thursday and of this amount the turnover in United States Governments accounted for $2,240,000, against $1,200,000 the day before.

Leaders in the rail group ending a point or so higher included Baltimore & Ohio 5s at 62¾, Erie 5s at 60½, Southern Pacific 4½s at 67⅛, and Pennsylvania 4½s at 117⅛. New York Central 5s got up a point to 63, but gave it up to end unchanged at 62. Chicago & Terre Haute 5s advanced 4 points on news that reorganization plans of the St. Paul, the parent company, contained favorable proposals for these bonds.

Cotton Rallies After Selling

Closing Prices Show Net Advances of 1 to 4 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—Except for slight initial declines, cotton was generally steady today on trade and commission house buying in a dull market. Final prices showed net gains of 1 to 4 points.

The market sold off to net losses of 2 to 6 points under May liquidation prior to cessation of trading in that position at mid-day, and under foreign selling.

Local buying on the steadier tone of the stock market and price fixing caused the market to rally to net gains of 4 to 7 points, but outside interest was limited and prices moved irregularly over a narrow range in response to moderate orders.

Singer Up $10 On N. Y. Curb

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 24.—The curb market continued its recent pattern today. Scattered specialties advanced substantially and fractional improvement predominated in the general list. Utilities were in better demand but a few of the oils encountered profit-taking.

Singer Manufacturing soared nearly ten points in light dealings. Babcock & Wilcox rose 8 point, while small improvement appeared in Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, Hiram Walker, Pioneer Gold and American Cyanamid "B." International Petroleum improved but Gulf Oil and Creole Petroleum were lower.

NRA Nine Clinches First-Half Pennant

Sleuths Held To 4 Hits; Bow, 2-1

4,000 Fans See Contest; Joe Freschi Ejected After Argument.

THE NRA TEAM won the first-half pennant in the U. S. Government League by defeating the Federal Bureau of Investigation, 2 to 1, on the East Ellipse before a crowd of 4,000 sandlot fans.

It was the seventh straight victory for the Blue Eagles and assures the first-round title despite the results of the remaining five games they play in the first-half schedule.

By virtue of yesterday's triumph the NRA tossers fell heir to the Clyde Tolson Trophy. The scintillating four-hit pitching and the hitting of Abbie Clark and George (Pepco) Barry were the high lights in the play of the Eagles, who were minus the services of Bobby Stevens and Joe Freschi. Freschi was banished in the first inning following an argument with Umpire George Watt, while Stevens spent yesterday afternoon laboring with law examinations.

Little Advances To British Final

39 on the first nine to stand 4 up. He 3-putted from 25 feet at the third and incurred a penalty on the seventh green, where he moved his ball while addressing it.

He picked up two holes more along the inward route. Little's tee shot at the 228-yard twelfth missed the green widely, but he approached magnificently to within a few inches of the cup for a winning 3 and he closed out his rival on the fourteenth, covering the 447 yards between the tee and the green with a long drive and a No. 3 iron and almost holed out from 20 feet for a birdie 3.

Sweeney was similarly unperturbed after holding Little even on the front nine only to be overwhelmed by the champion's spectacular 1 under par performance on the difficult last seven holes. "Well, I couldn't expect to beat a man like that," said the young American who has lived in England since he was 14 years old.

Good With Irons.

Blazing through the last seven holes, the Presidio pounder missed only one shot, pitching short from the rough to the edge of the fourteenth green. His iron seconds on the final two holes were among the most magnificent shots seen in the championship. He sent the wild, stampeding gallery of 8,000 into raptures at the 478-yard fifteenth, where he hooked his drive into the rough. His vision of the green was blocked by trees, but he played the shot blindly, pounded the ball to the green and won the hole with a par 4.

At the 347-yard sixteenth he rifled a 290-yard tee shot and then smacked a mashie the rest of the way to within 3 inches of the cup for a finishing birdie 3. In reaching the turn all even with Sweeney, Little required 40 strokes to 42 for Sweeney.

"Awful," Says Henriques.

Henriques has offered £90 to £30 the husky Californian retains the championship.

"It's awful what Little does to you," Henriques told the Associated Press. "I was driving as well today as ever in my life, but after Little pounded out a couple of 'mile-long' drives, I was ruined. I couldn't get my feet right and felt like I had four legs."

Dr. Tweddell, shooting steadily, rather than spectacularly, eliminated two of England's best golfers in Eric Fiddian, a former runner-up for the championship, and Thomas A. (Tony) Torrance, 44-year-old veteran member of the last four Walker Cup teams.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

THE outlook for fishing in Chesapeake Bay Sunday is not so good.

The water is still too cold and there is a notable lack of natural foods, namely, the schools of herring and lessor fry. There are plenty of hardhead, trout and a fair sprinkling of blues around the Chesapeake, however, and they should start biting as soon as the sun warms things up.

The Eastern shore is Sunday's best bet. Take along worms, shrimp and fresh squid. The waters around Deal Island, the mouths of the Honga and Choptank and the vicinity around the south of Solomon's Island ought to produce the best results.

Oregon Inlet conditions are reported to be excellent for the weekend. However, a congestion of anglers is to be expected, and unless you have already reserved a boat the chances of getting one are slim.

We have had many telephone calls from men used to boat fishing who were unable to obtain a craft. Rather than be idle, they tried the surf. Some had amazing luck and are now confirmed surfmen. Others were too impatient and quit.

Blues are as temperamental as the proverbial opera singer. Unless wind and tide and food are right (by food we mean schools of menhadden, etc.) you won't catch them. Strike the right moment, though, and they will afford you a lifelong thrill. They will smash your tackle, take all your bait and hit anything you offer.

This and That.

WHEN this column started on April 1, we frankly said that we were in "strange" waters and would have to feel our way. What we especially wish to reiterate is the fact that we are sincerely struggling to make this a clearing house, as it were, of honest information to those who like angling.

When you have news of interest to fellow fishermen let us have it. When we have data worth-while, we are always ready to pass it on. We like to print live news of fishing conditions, good places to go, unusual experiences and so forth.

A telephone call came Friday from Col. W. T. Chamtland, of the Federal Trade Commission and one of the District's best-known anglers. He asked us to mention the fact that anglers hitting the shore from Ridge, Md., would find Capt. W. Taft Trippet reliable and helpful. Capt Trippet has a new boat and a new dock at the foot of the hill at Ridge. He is prepared to take sport fishermen over to the Eastern Shore or anywhere about the bay. His number is Great Mills 16-F-12.

Another call was from Forris Stevens, telling us of the splendid fishing he had at Oregon Inlet with Capt. George Mann, of Manteo.

From Oliver Atlas we learned that Capt. Buck Parker, of Wachapreague, reports fishing there is now excellent. We have already had other reports from this place assuring us that trout, channel bass, blues and porgies were being caught in large size and numbers.

Here's an Idea!

IF YOU like deep-sea fishing, have the necessary equipment, muscle and heart, don't forget that out in the Gulf Stream, off Wachapreague or any other Virginia port, can be found all the big game fishing that one hears about from Florida, Black Island, Newfoundland and elsewhere.

Swordfish, marlin, tuna and whatnot follow that current. You don't have to go a thousand or so miles to find them.

Few men have effectively tried out the sport fishing possibilities of the Gulf Stream in waters due east. Of late we have encountered several District men who contemplate such trips this summer. Two of them are now building suitable boats. Later we hope to chronicle their plans and mayhap the outcome of their trips.

Lee-Jackson Will Oppose Fairfax

Closes Its Season Today; Fights Are Planned in Alexandria.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., May 24.—Lee-Jackson High School will close its baseball season tomorrow afternoon at Fairfax, opposing the Fairfax High nine.

Coach Reevely has named Will Jenkins and John Hawes as his starting battery.

Lance Edlin, coach of the Marine Reserves boxing team, has begun negotiations for a series of outdoor matches to be staged here this summer, the first to take place next month. Frank Ramey, lightweight champion of Virginia and an Alexandria youth, is captain of the local corps.

A number of local diamond stars in both the unlimited and midget class are performing for District teams in the National Capital City League. Joe Garvey and Doc Driefus are with Gichner's Iron Works; Russ Kidwell, Shout Taylor, Doug Morgan, Red McMenniman, Jack Demming, Ellet Cabell, Woody Godfrey and Hal Chilcotte are with Gordon's Cafeteria, Industrial League teams.

In the Government loops, Gene Zimmerman and Billy Lynch play with Farm Credit, Jimmy Titcomb, NRA seconds, and Art Lacy, D. C. Repair Shop nine.

Ted Matheny, Jimmy Lyons, Gill Wright, Jack Payne, Dick Robinson and Scott and Crocker perform for O'Donnell's Grill.

Taylor's Hit in 7th Wins for Mt. Rainier

Mount Rainier High School defeated the National Training School nine, 9 to 8, yesterday in a seven-inning game on the Mounts' field.

A single by George Taylor, with one out in the seventh, scored the winning run. Steve Ager and Bernard Todd pitched for the winners, the latter getting credit for the victory. Shortstop Tillie Scott led the Mounts at bat, with three hits in as many tries.

Rockville High Blanks Hyattsville Nine, 5-0

Rockville High School shut out Hyattsville High, 5 to 0, yesterday on the Hyattsville diamond. The winners shoved across all their tallies in the second inning on one hit, two walks, an error and two fielder's choices.

Cleveland, winning pitcher, allowed only five hits and fanned eight. Wells, Hyattsville hurler, also struck out eight, but gave up belt, looked up at the ladies' day fans as if to reassure 'em, and then forced Glenn Wright to hit a sharp grounder back to the box on which he started a fast double play with a toss to Bolton at the plate for a force-out at home. Bolton whipped the ball to First Baseman Joe Kuhel ahead of Wright. Newsom disposed of Luke Sewell for the third out on a grounder to Myer.

More Grief in Fourth.

Grief piled up for Newsom again in the fourth when, with one out, Appling walked and Wright singled to left. It was then that Sewell's drive hit Umpire Donnelly and Appling, who had crossed the plate as the umpire limped in pain, was waved back to third, leaving the bases filled. Manager Jimmy Dykes sent George Washington to the plate to pinch-hit for Tietje. Newsom worked the count to three and two and then fogged a fast ball by him for the second out. Myer again took care of the third.

Past that hurdle, Newsom settled down. He pitched a single to Zeke Bonura with two out in the fifth and another single to Sewell under the same conditions in the sixth, but the last ten White Sox who came to bat couldn't get on base at all, at all, and he had his shutout.

Heinie Manush began the proceedings against Tietje in the first inning when, with two out, he slammed a long triple to right center. It was the first of the Nats' 14 hits. Buddy Myer drew a walk and then it was that the Nats got a pair of tainted runs when Mule Haas misjudged Stone's line drive perfectly and eventually failed to make a shoestring catch of it. Two runs scored on the blow which was credited as a double. It was the first of Stone's four hits during the day.

But there was nothing tainted about the run the Nats scored off Tietje in the third. Ossie Bluege led off with the first of his three hits, a single to center, and Buddy Myer followed with the first of his three hits, another single to center. Bluege scored on Stone's fly to left.

As a relief pitcher, Vernon Kennedy was no relief to the White Sox. A pair of singles by Myer and Stone boosted the Nats' lead to 4-0 in the fifth and Myer's triple to the left-field corner was the pivotal blow of a three-run uprising in the sixth. They picked up another run in the seventh after Newsom led off with his perfect bunt, and wound up their scoring with a flourish in the eighth when Stone and Newsom provided the hits that figured in a nine holes for his margin. He shot a 72 against Pitt's 73. They were even at the turn.

Millwood Sets Horse Show For Today

200 Hunters Are Entered; Keenest Competition Is Expected.

By C. B. Carr.

A Staff Correspondent.

MILLWOOD, Va., May 24.—Horse breeders of Northern Virginia and nearby sections who have been formidable foes each year in the meets of the Virginia Horse Show Association are expected to furnish classic competition at the forty-second annual Blue Ridge Hunt Club horse show in Carter Hall Grove here tomorrow.

With more than 200 hunters entered and officials anticipating a large post entry list, Joseph W. Lewis, secretary, and Graham Dougherty, manager, today expressed the opinion that competition among the entries would be the keenest in years.

Familiar among the exhibitors is Dr. Lewis M. Allen, of Winchester, whose Clifton string last year carried off the lion's share of the honors. Dr. Allen has entries for tomorrow in 11 of the 15 classes scheduled.

Other Exhibitors.

Other exhibitors whose names have become a byword with the equine world include Graham Dougherty, Berryville; Kenneth N. Gilpin, Boyce; George P. Greenhalgh, of Boyce and Toledo, Ohio; Edward B. Jacobs, Boyce; Edward Jenkins, Millwood; T. N. Jones, Boyce; Mary Keogh, Briggs; Capt. Ewart Johnston, Millwood; B. O'F. Randolph, Millwood; Ralph R. Richardson, Berryville; A. Mackay Smith, White Post; George H. Burwell, Millwood; Miss Margaret Byrd, Winchester; Rice Carper, Briggs; Mrs. Spencer Carter, Richmond; William B. Clagett, Berryville; Walter Foley, jr., Briggs; Mr. and Mrs. Abram S. Hewitt, White Post High Acre Farm, The Plains; Mrs. R. James Hubbard, Boyce; Miss Virginia Jacobs, Boyce; Mrs. T. N. Jones, Boyce; J. W. Lewis, Briggs; Stacy B. Lloyd, jr., Millwood; Maj. P. F. Meade, U. S. Remount Depot, Front Royal, and John A. Payne, Boyce.

There are 11 entries in the class for yearlings suitable to become hunters, while the classes for three-year-olds and mares suitable to produce hunters have 13 each. Probably the keenest competition of the show will be the green hunters' class with 31 entries; the touch-and-out class, 14 entries; the class for hunters belonging to members of the Blue Ridge Hunt Club, with 22 entries, and the handicap class, 33 entries.

Luncheons, Dinners.

The Blue Ridge Hunt Club Horse Show occupies an important place in the spring social life of the community, it being generally understood that summer activities among the social set date from the meet. In scores of colonial homes in the community guests were being entertained tonight, while tomorrow a half dozen luncheons and dinners will be tendered guests at the meet.

Silver cups are to be presented the winner in each of the 15 classes, the donors being local persons who have followed the show during many of the 42 years of its existence. Donors of cups include Dr. Lewis M. Allen, Mrs. Karl Boy-Ed, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Dougherty, Kenneth N. Gilpin, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, Mr. and Mrs. Abram S. Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. R. Montgomery's Schools in 21st Meet

10,000 to Participate in Games at Rockville; Starts at 9 A. M.

ALL roads in Montgomery County will lead to Rockville today as some 10,000 students, teachers and spectators will journey to the county seat for the twenty-first annual track and field meet to take place on the Rockville Fair Grounds under the direction of Dr. William Burdick and his corps of Maryland Public Athletic League assistants.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High will attempt to defend its junior and senior high crowns in the principal events, but the competition is scarce and Coach Tony Kupka's boys may not be extended to cop the lion's share of the honors for the second successive year.

Coaches are bemoaning the lack of material, and few records, if any, will be threatened today by the mixture of baseball, tennis and golf stars that will be trackmen for a day.

The accomplishments of the county schools on the track has been the poorest in history this year. Gaithersburg, Sherwood, Bethesda, Montgomery-Blair and Rockville sent entrants to the "C" meet and University of Maryland meet, but none of the schools have yet scored a point. Montgomery-Blair was held scoreless in a triangular meet in Alexandria.

Competition will be divided into five classes—one-room schools, two and three room schools, grammar schools, junior high and high schools. The smaller children's events and the high school team games will get under way shortly after 9 a. m., with the height of the activities centering around the main events around 2 in the afternoon.

Winners making the best time in the major classes will represent the county in the annual State meet in Baltimore on June 7. Montgomery-Blair placed sixteenth last year.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — What, Going? — By Harry J. Tuthill

Well Jo, I just had a long talk with Ches. He's in the dumps over what would become of his fortune if anything terrible happened.
He has about 8000 relatives who'd take care of that problem for him.
He means someone real close who'd forget self and carry on from where he had to stop. Listen Jo, what do you think of this climate?
We'll leave early next week.
What! That's out right now. I positively can't... well, why get excited..? how can we leave until a boat gets here, eh?
Hartford Oakdale can get us home in the plane.
Plane..?..I forgot that...but listen, let's not fly off the handle.....flying thousands of miles isn't so hot. Suppose something happened?
Nothing happened when we came here, did it? Oh why waste time arguing about staying in a jungle one moment more than necessary? Why?

Corcoran Head To Be a Witness In Mellon Suit

Minnigerode to Be Asked About Storing Art for Banker.

Three surprise witnesses for next week, including C. Powell Minnigerode, Corcoran Art Gallery director, were called yesterday by the Government in the Mellon income tax suit.

Robert H. Jackson, Internal Revenue Bureau counsel, said Minnigerode would be questioned concerning arrangements under which several million dollars' worth of paintings in the collection of Andrew W. Mellon, former Treasury Secretary, were deposited in a gallery vault.

One of the issues in the $3,000,000 tax controversy centered around whether the former Cabinet officer intended to establish a national art gallery in Washington. Government counsel has sought to discount an announcement by Mellon of such plans.

Jackson declined to divulge what question would be asked of the other two unexpected witnesses, H. A. Phillips, Pittsburgh, a Mellon employe, and F. R. Danton, Pittsburgh, of the Melbank Corporation.

Norman Merriman, New York investment counsel, final witness before a week-end recess, told the Special Tax Appeals Board the outstanding stock of McClintic-Marshall Construction Co., in which Mellon was a heavy investor, was worth "not more than $140 a share" in 1913. On cross-examination Maynard Teall, acid-tongued attorney for the petitioner, sought to gain support from the Government witness for his claim that Mellon's stock was marketable at $500 a share.

"If the company had been sold," Teall asked, "how quickly would it have paid for itself on the basis of your valuation?"

"In slightly less than four years," Merriman conceded.

Teall traced the financial history of the construction company from 1913 to 1930 and inquired whether a purchaser at Merriman's figure would have earned $72,800,000 on his investment during that period. He drew a reply of "that sounds correct."

"That would have been a very profitable transaction, wouldn't it?" the lawyer demanded.

"My suspicion is you can find a number of companies that turned out better," Merriman countered, refusing to agree with Teall's contention that his McClintic-Marshall estimate was unduly low.

"That was the most optimistic estimate a conservative man could have made at that time," the witness declared.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

TOMORROW, employes of Agriculture will enjoy their first annual field day at Marshall Hall with a program of events ranging from baseball games, dancing, freak races to boat rides and picnic lunches. It is a benefit affair, the proceeds going to the Athletic Association and the Musical and Theatrical Guild.

BAKER.

In the absence of Francis G. Robb, BAE, president of the association, who is out of town on Government business, Frank Curran, Public Roads, will be host to the vast throng.

The highlight of the program is the baseball game at 3:15 p. m. between Agriculture and AAA. Other events scheduled include:

Archery, 11 a. m. to 1:30 p. m.; track and field, 1:30 to 2:30; fencing, 2:30 to 3; hiking, 3 to 5; assembly, 6 to 6:30, and dancing, 7 to 10. The following events will go on intermittently all day: Soft ball, horseshoes, golf driving, rides and miscellaneous amusements.

A. E. Edwards (P), BAE, is chairman of the committee arranging the program and is assisted by Homer E. Pryor (F), AAA, baseball and track; Jimmy Hitchens (F), AAA, coordinator and master of ceremonies; John Mansuy, BE and PQ, etnertainment; Saul Herkwitz, AAA, publicity; George Field, BAE, arrangements; Joel Winiwer, Dairy Industry, archery; E. Jones, C. and S., soft ball; Charles Guion, AAA, soft ball; Charlotte Wade, AAA, girls' athletics; Elsie Romero, BAE, treasurer, and Adelaide Zipperstein, secretary.

It is expected that Charlotte Wade, track star, will find keen opposition in Shirley Cunningham, University of Idaho star, and Frances Winter, Atlantic City champion, in the women's division of the track meet.

An exhibition of soft ball pitching by Abe Rosenfield, Catholic University star, now a member of the Agriculture soft ball team, will be a feature. He is regarded as the best in Eastern soft ball circles.

Police Examinations Announced.

Applications for open competitive examinations to fill vacancies in the position of Private, Class 1, Metropolitan; Class 1, National Park Service, for duty in Washington and on the Mount Vernon highway will be accepted until June 1, Civil Service Commission announces.

For service in Washington, applicants must be residents of the District and those appointed must remain such residents while so employed. The National Park Service will make appointments from this examination for duty in patroling the Mount Vernon Highway, which will extend eventually from Great Falls to Mount Vernon on the Virginia side of the river, and from Great Falls to Fort Washington on the Maryland side. Therefore, residents of Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax counties in Virginia, and of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties in Maryland will be eligible for service in the States in which they reside.

Class 1 position in both forces pays $1,900 a year. Applicants must be between 22 and 32 years old, exceptions being granted in cases of military service. Additional information may be obtained at Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

DAN P. MULARKEY.

AFTER many decades, Florida has at last granted absentee voting privileges to its citizens residing in Washington. On ten previous occasions absentee voting has been defeated in the Legislature.

To Dan P. Mularkey, RFC, secretary of the Florida State Society of Washington, goes most of the credit for the winning of franchise for more than 1,500 Floridians here. He assisted in preparing bills for the legislature at the present session and kept the legislators "pepped up" on the subject until it was finally passed in both houses.

Mr. Mularkey is a candidate for the office of treasurer of the District Division of the Young Democrats of America in the election Monday night.

Employes in the Procurement Division, Treasury, are mourning the death of their fellow worker, Z. Elton Roberts, of Oklahoma. Mr. Roberts, who had been attending law school, died Wednesday in George Washington University Hospital.
